The American Generals. A third letter from one of Prince Napoleon party, and by some supposed/to have been writ-ten by the Prince himself, appears in the Paris uone Nationale of Sept. 4. We extract 4 Or the following interesting personal paragraphs :-

GENERAL SCOTT .- General Scott is a man of enormous height and corpulence, aged about 75 years, gouty, worn out, almost ended. He is Lieutenant General, a grade corresponding to that of Marshal, and to which is attached the permanent command of the regular army in time of peace as well as in time of war. In the United States there is but one Lieutenant General, and he is in perpetuity Commander-in-Chief of the army, a sort of War Minister for life. while the Cabinet officer who has the title of Minister of War, is more specially charged with the mili-tary administration. General Scott, therefore, ects all the operations of the present war, just as in France the Minister of War directs the armies in the field commanded by generals-in-chief. General Scott, is, or rather has been-for I repeat he has the air of a man whose career is ended true gentleman, the manner of an EnglishGen eral, well educated, enlightened, and belonging, as well by his age as his manners, to quite a different generation than the present one He has never commanded any but the regular army, in contrast to the militia. It was at the head of the regular army that, in 1847, he made the splendid campaign of Mexico, landed at Vera Cruz, marched on the capital, which he seized after an obstinate battle, while General Taylor, on the frontiers of Texas, and at the head of American militia, won the victory of Buena Vista. General Scott, who is a very gallant man, has, besides, an excessive self love ; his countrymen have so often compared him to Napoleon that the comparison has ended by making some impression on him. He likes to recall the fact that he has never been defeated, and even that in his military career the enemy has never taken from him either a detachment or a post.

GENERAL M'CLELLAN.-General M'Clellan commanded, some days ago, in WesternVirginia a province half subjected and half revolued Charged with the duty of pacifying it, he acquitted himself of that mission with the greatest nuccess. Of the two secessionist generals who opposed him one was taken with his whole column, the other was killed and his troops dispersed. These successes which American exaggeration has transformed into great victorie have given from day to day an immense popularies to M'Clellan. You see his name at New on placards, on banners, in the

GETTING A WEDDING-COAT .--- Among the anounty, still living, was married during the Revolution, but under singular difficulties. There was an obstacle to the wedding which seemed unsurmountable. He had no wedding coat, nor was wool to be had to make one, and it was in and he was anxious to be married without delay. At last the mother of the intended bride discov ered the difficulty, and promptly had some of her sheep shorn and sewed up in blankets to keep them warm, while of the wool she spun and wove a coat for her intended son-in-law.

GENERAL BEAUREGARD .---- I have told you of the Generals commanding the Northern Army. The details which I send you would be incomplete were I not to speak also of those who command the Southern army. General Beauregard is of French origin, that is to say, his family emigrated from France to Canada about a hundred and fifty years since. His father left the English colony to become a citizen of the United States, and settled in New Orleans. Heithere changed his religion, abjuring Protestantism and embra-cing catholicity, which is the religion of the General and his family. A pupil of West Point Beauregard was a Lieutenant Colonel in the re-gular army when the war broke out. He had guin army when the war broke out. He had just heen appointed Superintendent of the West Point Academy. The Government at his state, Louisiana, recalled him, made him leave the Federal army, and President Jefferson Davis immediately conferred upon him the rank of General and the command of the troops at Charles-ton. We know that that semanand gave him the opportunity of firing the first can-non shot which cent the flag of thirty-four stars.
