VOLUME 7.

From the Colonial Empire EVIDENCE BEFORE THE FOR INVESTIGATING THE
"JOBBER" CHARGES

The honorable Mr. Fisher then referred to the circumstances of not examining myself, I saw only a certain plan that I would necessarily have examined them all.

The name and quality of lands indorsed on the back of the grant.
I do not consider this of sufficient importance to bring under the notice of the Government, I thought more of names that there was more of going on, more especially the two parties, I was appointed Attorney second time.

I understood from Mr. Inghes that was not good for settlement, but of kind of land, which might be valued wood, or some other purposes. How-information I do not know, but I land along there that was good for had already been taken up.

I do not remember, when the first commenced to build the Railroad any steps to prevent this land taken up by speculators. I was not concurrent with the Land department sold to-morrow, and the interest on realized, it would amount to a very large I never had any attention drawn

The prevailing mind with regard regulations of 1855 as to those reserves they could not be worked out.

The orders in Council of 1855, of press language repeal those of 1855, were intended to supersede them. I are the Regulations in force now never were acted upon, and were losolete. The Regulations of 1855

I think the Regulations of 1855 forced, and known, ever since first I do not remember that the defect of ing the former orders of Council by was brought under the notice of the and not acted upon. The regula-repeal those of 1843, but not those ords, tho' it did in effect. Those I intended for Emigrants.

I do not know that this land was fallen into the hands of speculators, ations of 1855 had not been suspen-

As the Attorney General, and I the Crown, I do not think that the 1855 could be repealed, without any orders in Council, expressly in-speaking.

I think the sales were legal under in Council then, although the former unrepealed.
