Washington, June 26-During the com paratively brief time the senate was i session, the conference report on the Isth mian Canal bill was agreed to and the general deficiency bill, the last of the bi supply measures was passed. A slight protest was made against the appropriation of $500,000 for the Buffalo exposition and $160,000 for the Charleston exposition, but finally they were included in the bill. The measure also carries $45,000 for the pay-ment of the expenses of the last illness and death of President McKinley, including physicians' pay.

Tonight, at the end of a 9-hour session and a debate lasting night and day for a week, the house passed the Philippiac civil government bill, practically as it came from the committee. It was pract cally a party vote, 147-97. The minority substitute for the establishment of a ter porary government in the islands and their permanent independence as soon as a stable government could be established was defeated 95 to 136. The house adopted the conference re port on the Isthmian canal bill thus ac cepting the bill in toto as it came from the senate. The bill will now go before

New Tobacco Trust War.

New York, June 26-With a new scheme of the International Mining Congress, has ing taken control of the American Tobac- baton in his belt co Company and all its branch concerns has undertaken to drive out of busine those small dealers who cater to the con sumers of the cheaper grades of cigars. It is doing this through the medium of what is known as the United Cigar Stores Company. The concern is not a part of the trust, but the trust is paying all the increased expenses which are incurred in the movement. The plan is simply to drive the smaller dealers out of their places and in this way make it next to impossible for them to do business.

Wherever a man is found who does not sell the wares of the trust, and whose sell the wares of the trust, and whose business is enough to bring in a good living, an agent of the United Cigars Stores Company goes to his landlord and offers him a substantial increase in the rent of the store if he can get rid of his tenant, with the prospect, as well, of making a long lease of the premises.

Already, 40 stores operated by the company, have been opened in various parts of the city, and in the majority of cases they were occupied formerly by dealers who, although they refused to handle the trust's goods had managed to acquire a good trade.

I cannot tell you by what professional name Hornheam goes, for that is the restriction that he put upon me when he told me about his first important case, and gave me permission to publish the story.

He and another officer were on duty one dark night, when they heard the shriek of a woman, and cries of "Murder! Murder!

Help, Help!" Hornbeam at once located the place from which the shricks came, as a notorious dive in "Hell's Half Acre." He rushed to the house and found that a hurt. The woman who got stable? was a woman who was not a frequenter of the handsome young lady, and she gave her place, but one of the richest and most refined ladies of the city, had been seriously only interest was to enjoy the warm fire and loaf a while. Some few of the people approached and talked with him, but more either ignored him or seemed inclined to keep aloof from a loafer in police clothes, as a matter of good taste rather than of fear. One man sat in the coruer, and seemed deeply engrossed in a game of cards, all by himself. Another appeared to be asleep, as if from exhaustion, while yet ano her was toiling heavily with an apparent case of 'too much the night before.'

The sprightliest person in the room was a handsome young fellow of about twentyfive, who seemed to have plenty of money and a disposition to spend it freely for the benefit of his fellow men. He played billiards now and then, but spent the most of his time escorting people to the bar and treating them to the best iquors that were there to be found. After a while he approached Hornbeam, sat down by him, and with the most winome air introduced himself. "I have heard so much about you, Mr. Hornbeam, that I have felt a great anxiety to get acquainted with you. My name is "I am glad to meet yeu, Mr. DeBardele ben," said Hornbeam, and asked, 'What
