THE MAIN ISSUE FIRST.

Webster, speaking once on a constitutional issue, began by demanding that the question before the House be read. Some men, for party purposes, are diligently seeking to make the people forget the issue. The issue is not what the city may have next year in the way of improved facilities for the handling of mail and other steamers, it is not the

was intending, at the banquet to himself and there, but at a meeting of his Conbeen used to favor one port at the expense of another. That point has not been technically proven, but it has been acknowledged by the President of the Canadian Pacific that they are able to go to Halifax, this winter by "grace of the L C. R."

Was intending, at the banquet to himself and there, but at a meeting of his Conservative supporters at the dinner in the evening. Mr. Jarvis added bitingly that to present there the case of the government to relation to the Gutelius-Bosment concerning public business should be made to the company then assembled, and that as he could no longer number at Wednesday's meeting to discuss matters bearing directly upon the prosperity of the port, it naturally was thought that the one matter most vitally affecting St. John, not only now but hereafter, could not properly escape frank public

Mr. Hazen replied that the government would not so prevent the agreement from becoming effective. He intimated, in fact, that it would be carried into effect, and that it was likely to remain in effect for six months at loast, since Mr. Gutelius had full power to make it and the government would not be likely to interfere with it at least until the Railway Commission had decided, if it should so decide, that the large effect of the interfere with it at least until the Railway Commission had decided, if it should so decide, that the large effect of the interference with it at least until the Railway Commission had decided, if it should so decide, that the large effect of the interference with it at least until the Railway Commission had decided, if it should so decide, that the greement was discriminatory.

Thus at last there was drawn from Mr. Hasen a direct and somewhat alarming statement from the standpoint of St. John. Those who heard it instantly recalled the fact that Mr. Borden and Mr. Hazen are on record as saying that while Mr. Gutelius had power to negotisely what services were rendered by Hon, Mr. Cochrane, the Minister of Rail-to this city, on the pretence that it is essentially political and ought therefore to be relegated to political debating societies or purely partizan meetings.

The hollowness of this pretence was pretty thourshly exposed Wednesday, when, in this representative meeting of the Board of Trade, the effort still longer to exclude the matter of the mall ships from open discussion was renewed. It was known that Mr. Hazen was intending, at the banquet to himself and Hon. Mr. Hazen in the evening, to make some announcement, presumably

And what of the other Conservatives who spoke out on that occasion—will they stand by their words today, or will ly the heads of it, St. John, which has asked for the document in vain, ought Mr. Hasen a direct and somewhat alarmto have an explanation from somebody.
