UNITED STATES. An Iowa town has made its streets one andred feet wide, so that there need be o crowding at the lynchings.

An Omaha woman made a wager that she would kiss King Kalakaua, and she lid it at one of the public receptions The President of the Kansas Agricul

It is said that "a church sexton at Watertown, New York] has officiated at Watertown, New York has officiated at 4893 funerals and cried at every one of them, and he has tears enough for as many more funerals." If that man should take a sudden notion one of these days to break away the dam and shed all those tears at once, it would be a sad thing for the people who live farther down the valley.

An advertisement in the New B tandard drew out such a rush of custom Standard drew out such a rush of custom that the advertiser was obliged to lock the door of the store till the large number of people present could be waited upon, after which more customers were admitted, keeping the clerks busy till 10 o'clock in the evening. The sales amounted to five times more in value than ever before in that store.

No shrewd actor now travels in the South without having the play of "Riche lieu" in his repertoire. When, as the Cardinai, he says, "Take away the swords: States may be saved without it," he has time to go out and count the evening's receipts before the applause, which "rises and falls, swells into thunder and dies away, only to rise again," subsides,

There is a story of a certain Boston Doctor of Divinity, whose name they spell with a "P." A man of the same name died, and a zealous newspaper fellow, seeing the death in the paper and thinking; only of Dr. P., wrote a most enthusiastic obituary. A wag met Dr.
P. the next day. "What, you are not dead!" he said. "Well, then, you ought to be. No man can ever live up to that obituary."
