POULTRY DISEASES

Mr. A. B. Wickware, Assistant Pathologist of the Biological Laboratory, Ottawa, writes: For a number of years investigations have been conducted in Canada, to determine the nature and prevalence of diseases of poultry.

The need for further research is emphasized by the fact that the exigencies of war-time have given a stimulus to the poultry industry, and it is natural to assume that this additional interest has led to an increase, rather than a decrease, of poultry disorders.

When the work was first started by this department, very little was known about the ground thoroughly, poultrymen were requested by press notices, correspondence and personal appeals to co-operate as fully as possible by sending in sick and dead birds for study and diagnosis. In pursuance of this policy, the department guaranteed express charges, and in the last five or six years, the examination of specimens has become a task of considerable magnitude.

It therefore seems timely, when economy is the watchword, to make a few suggestions as to what work we desire to undertake, and to point out the various causes which result in individual deaths in flocks, and which can be easily recognized by the poultryman at home. In this connection, it may be pointed out that live and dead fowls are frequently forwarded to us via express from remote districts in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the expense of transporting these birds is wholly unjustifiable where the losses are limited to one or two fowls.

From a study of our records individual losses may be attributed to the following conditions, none which can be transmitted to other members of the flock:

Affection of the Heart:—These are usually manifested by a quantity of fluid within the covering membrane, and in some instances by an accumulation of yolk-like material, the result of inflammation.

Rupture of the Liver:—This occurs in fowls which are excessively fat, and is recognized by sudden death, and the filling of the bowel cavity with blood.

Apoplexy, or a rupture of a blood vessel in the brain. This disease can be determined only by the absence of other lesions and the suddenness of death.

Peritonitis, or inflammation of the bowels and covering membranes. Peritonitis is caused by the partial development of eggs in the bowel cavity; closure of the egg-duct by large eggs; or accumulated yolk material, etc. Frequently the diseased ovary is responsible for this latter condition.

The above diseases are those usually responsible for individual deaths, and may be detected by examining the birds. The infectious diseases which spread rapidly through flocks concern us chiefly. Such diseases as Fowl-cholera, Tuberculosis, Blackhead in turkeys, Roup and Coccidiosis may be classified as infectious, and it is essential that they be recognized early, so that their spread may be checked.

Worms are also very troublesome, and we have already published directions for getting rid of these parasites. These bulletins may be obtained upon application to the Publications Branch of the Department.

If poultry owners desire to have parasites identified, the parasites—preserved in alcohol and securely packed—may be sent by mail to the Laboratory.

With reference to Tuberculosis and Blackhead, our bulletins fully describe these two diseases, and any poultryman should be able to diagnose them after reading our literature and seeing the illustrations.

To prevent misunderstanding of the aims of the department, we wish to restate that we are desirous of investigating affections which are responsible for large losses.

In cases of suspected poisoning, a public analyst should be consulted, as we do not undertake work of this nature.

As previously stated, where only one or two deaths occur, the express charges usually total more than the market value of the birds.

We trust, therefore, that poultrymen will assist us in our economic policy and send fowls only when several deaths have occurred simultaneously and the cause cannot be determined at home.

Wesley Dale, a farmer, thirty years of age, of Mersea township, was instantly killed when a circular saw he was serving broke.

The Civil Service, as it stood on the 1st April, 1918, had a strength of 4,147 permanent and 6,324 temporary inside employees, and 18,593 permanent and 12,555 temporary outside, a total of 41,619.

Industrial capital of the country. The incomes of skilled labor, clerical employees, agriculturists, and certain other classes have been considerably increased within the past few years, and are not likely to diminish in proportion to the fall in the cost of living. Such incomes therefore, afford a much larger range for the exercise of economy and thrift, and thus for the accumulation of moderate but substantial funds of capital. Not only will these, if invested with the government, be the means of their own increase, but will furnish a reserve for emergencies or assistance in declining years.

There are, of course, many other phases of this subject, especially those connected with the personal advantage of the small investors in the national funds, through the purchase of thrift stamps or otherwise. The above considerations, however, sufficiently indicate at once the national advantage and the urgent national requirements that every form of saving is necessary to meet the present and future needs for additional domestic capital for the maintenance and development of the country.

Ingenious Prisoners

Amongst the prisoners in the French convict settlement of New Caledonia were two marine officers of engineering, who, a few years ago, received a pardon for making a daring and ingenious attempt to escape.

Living together in the same hut, these men were engaged for years in digging a secret tunnel to the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a chamber, in which, with pieces of drift-wood and little bits of steel and iron smuggled into the hut, they fashioned a boat, the metal being at first used to make tools and afterwards to form bolts and rivets. Then with infinite pains they built an engine to propel the boat. After laboring for seven years they completed their task. Everything was ready except the provisioning of the vessel, when they were betrayed by a fellow-convict to whom they had confided their plan.

So impressed, however, was the French commandant by their marvellous energy, skill, and patience that he succeeded eventually in obtaining after a year a pardon for them.

No Luck Neither

An old dorky who got religion last month decided to join the church. He selected, of course, the richest and handsomest church in town, the church with the finest music and the best preaching. Then he called on the pastor and stated his design.

But the pastor hummed and hawed. He felt that his fashionable flock wouldn't welcome such an addition as the old dorky. He didn't want to hurt the old fellow's feelings, however, and finally he said:

"Go home, Uncle Rooster. Go home and pray over it. This is an important matter and it should be made a subject of prayer."

Old Uncle Rooster went home, and in a few days he was back again.

"Well?" said the divine. "Well, what's the verdict now?"

"Ah, prayed an' Ah prayed," said Uncle Rooster; "an' de good Lawd he say to me, 'Rooster, my son. Ah wouldn't bother mah haid about dat maddah no mo'. Ah've been a-tryin' to git into dat church mah-self fo' de last twenty-nine years an' Ah ain't had no luck nuther.'"

Great Preservative

Secretary Daniels, apropos of nationwide prohibition, said the other day:

"After all, nationwide prohibition, if strictly enforced, will be good thing for us. The only praise that can be given alcohol is that it is an excellent preservative."

Mr. Daniels smiled.

"Yes," he ended "you can preserve anything in alcohol, except your health and your secrets."

At Last

A poor man, who had hardly been able to clothe his wife and family properly, one day hit upon an invention—something to do with air-planes—which he sold for a good round sum.

The poor man went to his wife with tears in his eyes.

"At last, my dear," he cried, "you will be able to buy yourself some decent clothes."

"I'll do nothing of the kind," she retorted. "I'll get the same sort the rest of the women are wearing!"
