

should we do the German military authorities the injustice of supposing that they were animated by any solicitude for the principles of international law, and blundered into illegality by some unhappy accident? Their folly was of a different kind, and flowed from a different source. They knew quite well that when Captain Fryatt's gallantry saved his ship, the Germans had sunk without warning 22 British merchant ships, and had attempted to sink many others. They knew that in refusing tamely to submit himself to such a fate he was doing his duty as a man of courage and of honour. They were resolved at all costs to discourage imitation"!

On Sunday, August 6th, one of the largest demonstrations which had ever gathered in the historic Trafalgar Square in London, met to protest against this latest crime. It represented the great body of the working people of England. A letter from Mrs. Fryatt