JAMES CRANKSHAW, B. C. L., Barrister, Montreal.

The publishers place this work upon the market, confident of its meeting with the full appreciation of the judiciary, the legal profession, and the general public. The enactment of the Criminal Code of Canada has rendered the publication of it, in convenient form, absolutely necessary; and the author of the present work has taken advantage of this fact not only to give the text itself, but to add thereto explanatory notes and comments, with apt illustrations, and full and complete reference, to the Imperial Commissioners' Report,—upon which our Code is mainly based,—and to leading English, Canadian and American authors and cases.

The great care, deep study, and extraordinary research given by the author to his work, and the immense store of information it contains makes it indispensable to all who are, in any way, concerned in the administration of our Criminal law.

That the Work is of the highest practical value is shown by the many testimonials of appreciation,—which have been received from Judges, Crown Counsel, University Professors of Law, and practising Barristers,—some of whose letters are printed on the following pages.

The edition is in one royal 8vo. volume of 1664 pages, clearly printed on strong paper, and bound in the best half calf, or circuit.
