JAMES REDPATH TO LECTURE ON THE IRISH FAMINE.

announcement that Dr. James Redpath is to lecture in Boston on "Famine and Landlords" will excite wide attention. and Landfords' will excite while attention. He is not an Irishman, nor has it been known that his sympathies have been spe-cially given to Ireland. Though his active life has been spent in America, Mr. Red-path is an Englishman by birth and descent. He went to Ireland a few months ago as correspondent for the N.Y. Tribune. Mr. Whithlaw Reid briefly said to him:

"Find out the facts, and report them." On arriving in Ireland, he presented letters of introduction to both the landlord and the land-league sides. He pro-ceeded to examine both views. He was rather prejudiced against Mr. Parnell and his agitation. He visited the famine dis-tricts in the West of Ireland, asking for information from Protestant ministers and priests, and also from resident landlords and agents, and lastly from the wretched homes. He sums up his judg-ment in one sentence in The Indeplendent of last week: "There is a famine in Treland." It was something to have a man with a heart and brains, to tell the truth. The English Gevernment and their officials, English Gevernment and their officials, the landords and their agent's friends, kept up one cry that the famine was exaggerat-ed, that there was no real suffering. "One day," says Mr. Redpath, "I rode out with a priset in County Mayo, to examine the condition of the poor in his parish. He offered to take me through the whole of his reach-treather miles in learch. his parish—twenty miles in length. I could not endure the dreadful sight I saw in the cabins of the peasantry. After we had ridden two miles I caused the priest to turn back. I grew sick and wept like a child. Yet, when I returned to the hotel, a banker from a neighboring town told me (not knowing what I had seen) that there

(not knowing what I had seen) that there was no distress in the county, and that the people were never so well off." Mr. Redpath has returned from Ireland full of zealous sympathy with the people and with the agitators. "The great under-lying cause of the famine," he says "is landlordism." We have heard him say, while his face quivered with emotion: "At first when I saw the unspeakable wretched-ness of the people, it made me sick. I never could speak to those who were with me: I could only curse—curse the system of ownership and the rule that had brought it about."

It about." The famine is not dying; it is growing. Mr. Redpath says:—"In June, July, and August, if the present rate of contribu-tions is not maintained, the famine will count it victims by the tens of thousands. England will do nothing. She has done nothing thus far."

The Irish people everywhere should remember the service done them by this able and honest writer. He has put be-fore the world the truth of Ireland's con-His words have weight, for no man could accuse James Redpath of say-ing aught but what he believed. He holds up as wicked and vile the landlord system of Ireland, which so many Ameri-cans support. "If landlords even in New England," he says, "acted as the landlords of Ireland act, they would perish at the here is of significant sectors." hands of vigilance committees."

Mr. Redpath is to lecture in Boston Theatre on "Famine and Landlords," on Sunday next, the 9th inst. The proceeds of the lecture will go to the Home for Destinute Catholic Children. We need not ask for an audience for him. There ought not to be an empty seat in the hall.—Pilot.

shelter or perhaps a home, and in return robbed them of a boon or gift more precious than life itself. Could the an-cestors of the Protestant O'Sullivans, O'Tooles, McCartys, and hundreds of others but see their cbildren or grandrobed them of a boon or gift more precious than life itself. Could the an-cestors of the Protestant O'Sullivans, O'Tooles, McCartys, and hundreds of others but see their children or grand-children kneeling or sitting in a Protestant meeting house, how happy they would feel can be more easily imagined than told. Many a child is lost to the faith through the carelessness of parents. Com-ing from a land where they know but of one true church and that almost the only one, they soon learn that here they could choose for themselves and be more happy in appearance, more admired in society by being liberal in their religious notions. One church was about as good as another in America and the Protestant was in every way far more prosperous than the struggling Ca-tholic. "To carry water on both shoulders" was the highest and holiest aim of the Irish Catholic, who wished to be regarded in America as a man of liberal views." The old men did you have

be regarded in America as a man of liberal views. The old man did not love his faith. He kept within the traces by of his faith. He kept within the traces by going to his duty once a year, and died barely crowding his bones into a conse-crated ground. But the example told upon the children. They never saw father or mother regularly attend at mass on Sunday. They never knew them to approach the Sacraments save at Easter time. They often heard them speak slight-ingly of church and holy things. Heard them ridicule the pious practices of others, and thus the young, taught by the old, soon began to think that the Catholic faith was nothing better than a mere faith was nothing better than a mere sham. The opportunities offered for hearing Mass or being present at instructions were not taken advantage of and at home religion had no place. Old folks then are somewhat to blame for the loss the Church has suffered here. Nor should the blame be entirely thrown upon the shoulders of the priests. They can do but little good when the home influence has a tendency to counteract the effect of their instruction. Then, when we hear of a Mac or an O' occupying a pulpit or a pew in a church other than Catholic, we may conclude that man was stolen from the faith which he should by right profess or was led astray by foolish, careless parents

TOUCHING INSTANCE OF SYMPATRY FOR IRELAND. THE PARIS CHIMNEY-SWEEPS AND THEIR

One of the most touching instances "One of the most touching instances of the sympathy felt in France for the sufferings of our distressed fellow-country-men has just been communicated to us by a kind and esteemed correspondent from the French capital. He tells us that in that city there has been for a long time in existence a benevolent little association, composed of the little commodiated composed of the little Savoyards and Auvergnats, whose chief occupation is Auvergnats, whose chief occupation is that of chimney-sweeping through the city. The association is under the guardianship of a good Parisian priest and of some young gentlemen from among the best families in the capital. They have provided a home for the hard-working, quick-witted little fellows, and devote a large portion of each evening to instructing them in the doctrines and morality of their Catholic faith. Most people suppose the manufacture of tobacco consists merely of taking the leaf and pressing it into plugs. The fact is, however, that the process is a very delicate one, and the least false step will injure the flavor. The leaf must be carefully at-tended to for months after it leaves the planter's hands. It must meither due to planter's hands. It must neither dry too quickly nor too slowly. Even after it has reached the factory the utmost delicacy of manipulation is required. The weather must be carefully studied, for if there is too much moisture in the air when it is pressed it will mould, and the same will happen if too much moisture is sprinkled upon it for the purpose of opening the leaf. Again, if it is overdried in the oven it will turn crisp, and will nip the tongue in smoking. It is by careful attention to all these points that the "Myrtle Navy" has been brought to such perfection. The firm who manufacture it have their own arm who manufacture it have their own storehouses in Virgmia, and from the time the leaf leaves the planter's hands until it is turned out of the factory, months after-wards, in plugs, it is under the care of their skilled and trusted employees.

These three, with many others, have now found it advisable to take furlough for an un-limited period, and to spend their salaries elsewhere. Some time ago the Rev. He had come as a stranger into his parish, and as such he left it, without anyone saying "good by" to him. His departure was so hasty that he even forgot his hat, and a child, that chanced to be near, brought it to him. This is the thirtythird Old Catholic priest that has made himself scarce, and the Rev. M. Masset, of Buix, who for eight months has not done a single parochial duty, will, it is said, soon follow him.

REFERENCES: From Henry Armstrong, near Woodstock. My DEAR SIL, Your Thermo Electric Va-por Bath, it appears to me has decided ad-vantages over any bath with which I am acquainted. Having made a full trial of it this week, I am now ready to pronounce it a great success. For rheumatism, I consider it unequalled, and I am sure that no one who gives it a fair trial will ever leave dissatisfied. Your Bath stands ahead of anything else I have tried, both as a luxury and a sanitary agent. I take great pleasure in commending them to all similarily affected. To Dr. Wilson. HENRY ARMSTRONG.
