TERRIBLE SECRET.

all the neighborhood will, you may depend on. We are not likely to fall. The invitation is like our kindess, Aunt Helen says. Thanks very much for it. His short-lived anger did away, he gave his hand frankly to his aunt. She was his wife's friend—the only one who had taken the slightest notice of her since her arrival. For the resident gentry had decided that they could not call upon the soap-boller's daughter.

mean thing to turn out from the home where she had enjoyed a life of luxury. He held up his hand in the country after—but she must be Ethel alone. By her side he sat as usual.

My dear child, her husband said, kissing her good-bye. "It isn't worth anything to me, but I will give you your own property, a flower in your hair, and your pearls. Be your own mistress, dear little girl, and there will not be a lady at Aunt Helen's able to shine you down."
