RURAL COMMUNICATION

Mr. Hains' letter, re Mail Service, should be a daily mail service between lygrumbling. I think all that is recountry places as well as for larger Member representing the County and centres of population. If the villages it will be remedied at once. had the same advantages as to mail, telephone, telegraph, and schools, as the towns have, there would be much less emigration from the farming districts. It is because the farmers are isolated that so many of them are so prompted to pull up stakes and move to more public places. Farmers are among the most intelligent of our citizens and the State should make every effort to surround them with the comforts and conveniences of life. In the matter of consolidation of schools, the people themselves have control. It is the Government's place to see that the proper telephone and dertaken by people in the British Isles, telegraph service is installed, and to by the Grand Trunk Railway officials provide more suitable mail accommo- in London, tew tickets show the desdations. Such places as Protection- Canada, where coal and gold, together ville, Trout Brook, etc., are worse off often supposed to be the chief reason than Redbank, having only two mails a week.
