MOST EARNING CAPACITIES ARE REDUCED TO ZERO BY YOUR SPENDING CAPACITY.

The greater the income of the man who is broke, the bigger fool he is. There is no factory in the world, except your own brain factory, that doesn't lay aside a certain amount of money for the wear and tear of its machinery.

Your income has nothing to do with your prosperity; it's your outgo that counts.

You men of Newfoundland will probably spend several thousand dollars on your own personal necessities within the next twenty-four hours. That is what it amounts to in the aggregate, and if you spend it carelessly the Country is going to have a National headache the next morning.

Now there is such a tremendous difference in the values and the quality of all kinds of merchandise in this present day, that you simply cannot afford to buy in a haphazard way.

It makes a lot of difference, for example, in buying a suit of clothes whether you get a suit that will leave you well dressed for six months, or shabby for the latter three months. And the same thing applies to everything you wear from your shoes to your hat.

It also makes a lot of difference whether the man you buy from is really behind his merchandise, or merely behind his counter. And, whether you are buying for quality or buying for price, the man behind his merchandise is the only man to trust.

But what you want to know is how to tell them apart. And the only sure way is to trust the men who go on record and ignore the others.

The man who advertises gives you his bond of good faith. He signs his name to what he says. If he doesn't live up to his claims, you've got something to come back at. You can put your finger on him. You know where he's at. The man who doesn't advertise has nothing to lose and therefore he is liable to be less careful of what he does.

This paper to-day is filled with the advertisements of men who have the courage to stand back of their merchandise. So it is foolish to take chances when there is nothing to gain.

It is far safer to go through this paper now; look over the advertising news; read what these men have to say and make your choice of all you are going to buy from their columns.

They are the leaders anyway in every line of trade. It is fair to assume that the things they offer will be best.

Fox, the Moroccan capital, is practically surrounded by hostile Moors. General Lyantry, the French resident Governor, says the situation remains serious.

A statement from Yuan Shai Kai, just received here from Peking, outlines the Chinese leader's plan. Based on universal conscription in this twentieth century, says Yuan, the newly constituted state must needs possess a strong army to maintain its independence. China is in a different position from England in encompassing the east, and from America. China must be modeled on such great continental powers as Germany and France.

HALIFAX, May 30.
John Donaldson, who conducts a small road house and shop at Birch Cove, four miles from Halifax, was shot and killed this afternoon, and an employee named Cody wounded, by a stranger who entered the store and began shooting. Cody gave a description of the man who did the shooting, and he was later arrested at Windsor. He says his name is Stanley, and that he hails from New Glasgow. The motive was evidently robbery.

BERLIN, May 30.
The General Council of International Transport Workers' Federation, whose headquarters are in this city, are preparing to back up the appeal of the British strikers and to proclaim a world-wide boycott of British shipping. Joseph, President of the International Union, announced that a cable vote of the heads of the organizations in nineteen countries, including the States, as to whether an international boycott should be called, could begin as soon as a full report had been received from London. He declined to discuss the probable result of the vote, saying there had been altogether too much chattering before hand in British labour circles. The General Council, he declared, would avoid this mistake, and the boycott would be declared without warning.

The General Council of the International Transport Workers' Federation at present consists of five Germans, as the result of an arrangement for a system of rotary executive authority and the establishment of the headquarters of the Federation in turn among the various nations affiliated to it.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, May 30.
Labour leaders threaten to call an immediate national strike of transport workers and riverside labourers, to be followed by an international strike, unless the result favourable to them be reached at a Conference to be held with the Board of Trade. To this Conference the Trades Unions will send delegates, although the employers have refused to take any part in it.

The organizing secretary of the Dockers' Union said this morning that the question of a national strike depended upon the Conference. If the result proved unsatisfactory, nothing could prevent it, and it would be followed by an international strike. Continental workers, he said, have already decided to strike, and it is only a question now of the confirmation of their decision by the international executive.

Employers do not take much notice of this threat. Previous experience has shown that continental workers, far from supporting British dockers, have been rather pleased to get the additional work coming to them as the result of such strikes.

Later in the day, despite the militant spirit displayed by the organizing secretary, the national strike movement received a serious set back, when the executive committee of the Sailors' and Firemen's Union, which is the strongest body of national transport workers' federation, decided against it. Notices were sent out by this body that there would be no stoppage outside London, unless the order was signed by the secretary of the Sailors' and Firemen's Union. This appears to indicate a split in the ranks of the Transport Federation, of which the Firemen's Union is the strongest body.

Many more non-unionists went to work this morning, which is likely to lead to some trouble, as nothing is more calculated to arouse the anger of the strikers than their appearance on the scene.

The transport workers' strike committee has decided to ascertain how far it can depend for support on transport workers outside London. At a meeting this afternoon a resolution was adopted asking the National Executive Council of the Transport Workers' Federation to meet at once for the purpose of calling for national support for the fight for the principles of trades unionism.

The Clairvoyant.

BY H. L. RANN.

The clairvoyant is a person who informs inquiring citizens what they are about to get and where they are going to get it. Our most successful clairvoyants are ladies whose ancestors foretold every great event in human history, from the fall of man to the Johnstown flood, and their mission is to let people in on the ground floor. There is intense and animated rivalry among clairvoyants. It is getting so that no greater disaster or failure in the corn crop can occur without having four or five clairvoyants rise up in 48-point Cheltenham and claim they saw it first. Every once in a while some cock-sure prognosticator will fail to prognosticate and beat a trustful patron out of his wheat margins, and this operates to reduce the attendance. The clairvoyant who is not a graduate of some correspondence school can tell at a glance whether a patron expects to pry into the future with a $2 bill or is willing to pay a fair price for a diagram of the stock market one week from Tuesday. Whenever a clairvoyant looks into somebody's hand and foretells a boiler explosion or an attack of smallpox, the price of admission goes up. Some clairvoyants are quite matter of fact in their operations and get down to business as soon as the offering has been taken, while others lurk behind a Japanese screen in a sable kimono and get into a sulphurous trance before projecting themselves into the week after next. The highest-priced clairvoyant in the market is the seventh son of a seventh son, who wears a Turkish trowsers and a far-away look and will contract to forecast anything from falling hair to the outcome of the presidential election. No clairvoyant will read more than three or four days in the future for anybody who is of a sordid and grasping nature and comes to the studio with small change and a skeptical mind. If you want action, take along a large, yellow bill and expose it carelessly to the light of day.

Gentlemen.—In January last, Francis Leclaire, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

TRY THE SUNLIGHT WAY.

The Dark Future.

By WALT MASON.

Dark trouble lines the brows of men who futureward are looking; how will the husband manage then? And who will do the cooking? The girls forsake the kitchen stove and granite-ware possessions, and struggle forward in a drove to join the learned professions. Some dancels aim to practice law with mannish weal and fury, and exercise the nimble law before a judge and jury. Another girl will deal in hope and heal the ailing sinner, and for her victory we hope—but who will get the dime? Lucretia writes a red romance with characters gadzooking; we hope to see her fame advance—but who will do the cooking? Our Mary has a call to preach; the cookstove she's forsaken; her latest sermon was a peach—but who will fry the bacon? Jemima plays the violin until your heart-strings quiver; we hope she may fresh laurels win—but who will stew the liver? The girls ambitious are indeed, each seeks a lofty billet, and where will sons and husbands feed when no one yields the skillet? No tempting grub, no vinds warm your grandson will make merry; he'll buy his food in capsule form from the apothecary.

What About the Second Keeper?

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Please give me space in your widely circulated paper to say some words about Cape St. Mary's. From time to time, since the 1st of May, I have been fishing at Cape St. Mary's, and for that matter I may say for the last forty years. I often have that fine light riding to one anchor—with an old man in charge and a boy—and so many lives depending on them at all times of the season. There was a lot of talk about having plenty of rope and lifeboats at all lighthouses this year, but we see none yet. What was the second assistant discharged for? Was it to give the one keeper more pay and save sixty dollars and deprive another family of a living. I do not grudge the keeper his regular salary, but we do not like to see a man's salary from the District of Placentia and St. Mary's going to him. If Mr. Thomas English was not a friend to the party, why not appoint another man from the district? Why did not Morris, Howley and Devereaux appoint their friend out in St. Bride's second Keeper of Cape St. Mary's light? What did they fool that man for, who fought fearlessly for them?

Yours sincerely,
PLACENTIA BAY FISHERMAN.

Pollyooly—Pollyooly.

Say it over and over and over again Pollyooly—Pollyooly—Pollyooly. Possessed of twenty shillings, a baby brother and a rare ability to tell the truth and use her fists, Pollyooly is thrown on her own resources at the age of twelve. She faces London gaily and conquers it with ease. Red-haired lovely Pollyooly is the very capable and capital heroine of this quaint, humorous and highly improbable, but happily possible and in every way delightful story, written by that very talented novelist, Edgar Jepson.

Colonial edition, paper, 50 cents; post paid on receipt of remittance with order.

Rammed it in, punched it in,
Rubbed it in, clubbed it in,
Pressed it in, careased it in,
Rapped it in, and slapped it in,
