

Nerviline Stops Earache in 10 Seconds Fixes Toothache in 2 Minutes.

It Seems to Possess Almost Some Divine Power Over Pain.

RUB ON NERVILINE.

Toothache is usually due to neuralgia in the gums or to the congestion and swelling of the nerve pulp. "As Nerviline" relieves congestion, you can easily see why it cures toothache.

Nerviline does more—cures any ache or pain—in any part of the body. It matters not where your pain is. It may be in a joint or muscle; it may be neuralgia or lumbago; it may be a surface pain is deeply situated in the back, side or chest. Nerviline will reach it; Nerviline will drive it out.

What is Nerviline, you ask? Just a liniment, but very much stronger in pain-subduing power than other liniments—one that penetrates more deeply in the tissue than any other liniment. It is a liniment that cures quickly, that gives permanent relief. You might spend ten or a hundred dollars, but you couldn't buy as much relief as you get from a single bottle of Nerviline.

We guarantee Nerviline: we refund your money if it does not relieve you. In many lands it is a household trust, a remedy that has justified itself under the experience of those who have used it. Guaranteed for neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, rheumatism, pleurisy, strains or sprains; the large 50 cent family size bottle is more economical than the 25 cent trial size. Dealers everywhere sell Nerviline.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Nov. 13th, 1916.

"COMING OUT" IN THE ARMY.

The "coming-out" process has spread not only to the War Office, but to branches of the service itself. Included among the air mechanics of the Royal Flying Corps are scores of shorthand-typists, and a very large number of these are now employed at Aerial House, the headquarters of the army, which up to recently was used as a hotel on the Thames Embankment. It has just been decided that by November 14 all air mechanics under 25 years of age are to be drafted from Aerial House to some depot at home or abroad, where women clerks cannot be procured, while by the end of the month all under 30 are to be sent away. These men are drawn from classes not fit for general service, but it is felt that more use can be made of these than is at present the case. It can scarcely be that this process will be confined to one section of a single Government department and, therefore, it was seen that an answer in the affirmative was quite expected in the House of Commons recently to an interpellation question to the Home Secretary and the President of the Board of Trade suggesting the release for military service of all men up to the age of 25 employed by or under their authority and their replacement by discharged soldiers or civilians over 42.

COLDS PREFERRED.

The wet and wintry weather we are experiencing in London just now is cruelly testing women outdoor workers, particularly the omnibus and tram conductresses, and on one line at least the amount of illness has led the employers to decide upon a shorter day's work for all female employees during the rough weather. "It is not only that women are unable to stand the rigours of the weather so well as the men," a tramway manager told me to-day, "but they so seldom take advantage of the protection afforded them. It is intensely difficult to get our young women to wear the oilskins which are placed at their disposal in wet weather. I believe they would rather catch a cold than look 'ugly,' as they call it."

SMALLER MATCHES.

Match manufacturers in Sweden, from whom Great Britain draws by far the greatest proportion of her supplies, have decided to reduce the size of their matches. The number of matches in each box will, however, remain the same. This Swedish industry has had many difficulties to contend with since the war began, owing largely to the prohibition of the export of timber from Russia. Home supplies of wood have proved insufficient to meet the demand. Of Swedish match production about 92 per cent. is exported. A firm of tobaccoists which has kiosks on the Underground railway stations has for some time sold at three boxes for 1d. specially made midget matches, which have been found to answer very well, and this has not been without its influence on the Swedish manufacturers in coming to their decision.

FAMOUS CHICAGO EDITOR.

Amongst the onlookers at the Lord Mayor's Show in London was one who himself is symbolic of a good deal of the Dick Whittington romance. This is James Keeley, the editor of the "Chicago Herald," and the man who made the "Chicago Tribune" one of the big papers of America, who is now revisiting England. He was born in London, and at one time was a newspaper hore. He had a newspaper pitch in Westminster, and often sold papers to Mr. Gladstone. It is difficult to believe, from the appearance of this remarkable man, that he can be over forty, or from his accent that he was London-born. He is a naturalised American.

CINEMA AND CENSORSHIP.

The cinema trade is bestirring itself in the face of criticisms magisterial and otherwise recently levelled against the picture houses, together with the threat of an official censorship to be imposed by the Home Office. A fighting fund has been started and manufacturers, renters, and exhibitors are being exhorted to organise for defence. The interest of the manufacturer is a very real one, because in the event of a film being prohibited before it reached the exhibitors the entire loss would be his. There is a desire in the trade to have the censorship issue fought out now. A public investigation is demanded in order to put "idle charges, slanders, and magisterial twaddle" to the test. Influential forces are arrayed behind General

Sir H. Smith-Dorrien in his campaign for a sweeter atmosphere in the entertainment world. The gallant General is undoubtedly on firm ground when he assails what passes for entertainment at some of the music halls; but it is maintained that, with regard to cinemas, he has relied on rather vague evidence reaching him from different parts of the country. The trade is very wroth with the "motley throng of clerics, Army Officers, Peeping Toms, cranks and croakers who are firing their pop-guns." We are likely to hear a great deal more about the subject in the near future.

A RECANTATION.

There has been no little amusement over the recantation of Lord Northbourne, of Betchingham, who a few years ago announced his intention of roasting an ox to celebrate the exit of Lloyd George from office whenever that happy event occurred. He is now so enthusiastic an admirer of Lloyd George's patriotic services that he now offers the animal for sale at a war charity auction. Lord Northbourne, of course, notwithstanding his anger at Lloyd George's Budget proposals of other days, was for nearly twenty years a Liberal member of the House of Commons—sitting for Gateshead from 1874 to 1893. Betchingham is a picturesque mansion of the Elizabethan type on the old Roman road between Sandwich and Dover. The position of it suggests that it actually occupies the site of some old station or residence of Roman date.

GERMANY'S POLISH DODGE.

Our enemies' proclamation of a kingdom of Poland has often been predicted. It only comes as a surprise now, because Austria and Germany were known to dispute each other's authority in the occupied territory. Austria long upheld her contention that none of Galicia should be reincorporated in Poland. Austrian Galicia should, on the contrary, said the Austrians, be extended. So one thing clear from the setting up of the new dummy kingdom is that Austria cannot now hold out for a portion of the spoils against Germany. A second point equally clear is that, the Germans at this late date take this step regarding Poland because they expect to leave it next summer and wish to leave the Russians an inconvenient legacy. But they have other reasons still more cogent. Volunteer Polish legions have failed; few Poles would enlist against Russia. Now a dummy Polish Government under a German Prince is to display its gratitude by voting compensation for Poles. By this means the Germans calculate that they may add a million men to their conscript soldiers and labourers.

SOLDIER TOYMAKERS.

The Duke of Connaught's first public appearance on November 10th since he came back from Canada was in the cause of the disabled soldiers. He went straight from the station, on his way to his home from his visit to the trenches, to the Prince's Skating Rink, London, where he opened the show of Christmas toys made in the Lord Roberts Workshops. The Duke made a particularly earnest appeal for this splendid new work, which is growing fast, and when all the branches in the country are started—there is to be a workshop in Manchester—will

THE GROCERY BILL.

The grocery bill is a monthly contribution to the high cost of living which makes father perspire in a heartfelt and enthusiastic manner. Groceries are bought by people for the purpose of prolonging life and keeping the stomach from becoming restless and dissatisfied. If it were not for the countless thousands of grocery stores which dot the landscape and carry everything from lamp wicks to leaf lard, the public health would be as far below par as the Mexican dime. The ease and rapidity with which people can order groceries over the telephone and more out of town the following week is one of the greatest blessings which we enjoy.

A few years ago the Grocery Bill did not bother anybody who intended to pay it. Groceries of all kinds were plentiful, and a round silver dollar would buy enough to subdue a large family for a week. Then the European war broke out. In several spots and created a bottomless demand for everything that is sold in a grocery store except aluminum-ware coupons. As a result, every husband and father is confronted with a bristling, two-fisted Grocery Bill which has the swollen appearance of a fat man with the dropsy.

The scandalous behaviour of the average Grocery Bill just at the time when soft coal is climbing faster than the winner of a hook and ladder con-employ five thousand men. The Duke spoke with especial sympathy of what it means to the disabled to have their minds employed. "Some of the cures effected in nerve cases," he said, "are little short of marvellous." What struck one first in the toys was the evidence of minds happily at work, striking out happy inventions that are quite as witty as anything Germany used to send us. The wooden portrait toys are especially jolly, and they have the merit of being cheap and easily made by crippled men. There is a jaunty little Lloyd George with a couple of shells tucked under his arms, and a delightful group, anything but "wooden," of Queen Alexandra taking a bouquet from a small child, a finely posed King Albert saluting troops, and many others. The returned soldiers have put humour and enjoyment into their craftsmanship. They are now tackling with success the stiff problem of making dolls' faces that will satisfy the most fastidious nurse. In the old days it was the proud boast of the Austrian that he only could do that.
