LONDON, THURSDAY, APRIL 17. BELGIUM.

The revolt of the workers in little Belgium is likely to prove very interesting. Both sides are organized to a fine point, the Clericals in settled control of the Government, with labor units of their own and holding the peasants in line, the Radicals and Socialists holding the major bulk of in the parliamentary Opposition.

It does not exactly follow that because a general strike has failed in France and other countries it necessarily will in Belgium. While its success may be improbable, Belgium, with its seven and a half millions in city than a country, the only city in don. City workers outnumber the are largely suburbans, market gardeners, dairy and poultry men. Every-

Belgium's life rests in her foreign trade, which is one-half that of the United States, though her population Sweden, where general strikes have been tried, are great agricultural regions; a stoppage of manufacturing and trade for any considerable time in Belgium will be a different matter. Formerly the battleground of France, Austria, Holland, and Spain, blighted by centuries of the foreigner's rule, Belgium, famous in older times for the arts of both peace and war, had grown dull and spiritless. The evil days had their culmination in the campaign of Waterloo, when the Belgian contingent fled to their disgrace from Wellington's side. But since 1815 it has been another story. Unbroken peace has reigned over the scarred land, except for a little tumult in 1830, when it separated from Holland and under the guarantee of Great Britain entered upon its modern course as an independent kingdom. Independence, representative government and peace have immensely prospered the people as a whole, though the mass of individuals fail to get their fair share of the wealth, Belgian capital has investments the world over. Physically, also, the race does not seem to have declined. A Belgian eight wrested the Henley honors from England for more than one season. rejoicing; it was at Ghent that our peace was made. If the present difficulties can be smoothed away by some reasonable concessions on the Belgian Government's part, 1915 should be a a long era of decay.

WHAT ELSE?

Some of the Conservative papers are criticising the Toronto Globe because it charged the Hon. W. T. White with being in favor of a contribution policy instead of a Canadian navy, overlooking the fact that in his speech he said, "Personally, I am opposed to any policy of regular and periodical contributions." But, despite his personal preferences, what else is he in may be pursued by the opponents of favor of except a contribution policy? A man must be judged by what he supports Mr. Borden's policy. What is that? There can be very little quesan aged patriarch by that time. Few of the present generation of public men will be alive in 25 years; none of

It is true that some Conservatives But don't hurry Santa Claus up. profess to believe that in the future some time conditions may be favorable for a Canadian navy. They say that when our wealth and population have doubled, or trebled, perhaps we may be able to build and man ships; and it will be time enough then to try the experiment of a Canadian navy. If we understand Mr. White he is disposed to think that way himself. But popes, is well-beloved. In this demothese people are inconsistent. One of cratic age his humble origin, comparthe arguments against a Canadian able to that of ex-President Fallieres, haval policy is that it would be a his simple modesty and unassuming "separatist" policy. it be less so in the future? It matters little what the personal opinions of any man may be. If he upports the Borden contribution policy of today he commits himself to a permanent policy of that character. He may say he does not approve of it; that he is only supporting it till he can get something better. But if he wants something better he has the opportunity now. The policy upon which the Canadian Parliament was united in 1909 is as good today as it was then.

MR. HEARST TO THE RESCUE.

The probabilities are that President Vilson, in his efforts to reduce the tarff, and give the consumer a chance, will have to contend with the same kind of loyalty that the Liberals occasionally meet in Canada. There is a men. certain class of people who, whenever their pecuniary interests are in danger, wave the flag, and invoke the spirit of patriotism to fill their pockets. And they are almost as active in the United States as in Canada.

Mr. William Randolf Hearst, a wealthy journalist, who controls a large number of papers, and has had political ambitions for a good many years comes out with a full-page, doublethe workingmen and represented also leaded proclamation, calling upon the people of the United States to take notice of the impending dangers which threaten to engulf the republic through the pernicious ideas of the President. Here are some of the indications:

Things are not looking so well for the militants. By the way, Mr. Marriott Watson, the novelist, suggests that they should rather be called the 'malignants." That was the Roundheads' name for the Cavaliers. The militants are about as wantonly destructive as Rupert's men. What drink did, hysterics can do. Many of the militants also are aristocrats, who have taken to fighting for want of another trade. But their attacks hurt women as much as men, friends often more than foes. Burning a man's house down hurts "his daughters and his sisters, his cousins and his aunts," almost as much as him or the house. What they say about it might be more printable than his remarks, but not and statistical brain is going out into less emphatic in their dialect.
