H. Shannon, one of the executors of the estate. It was pointed out that when the deceased made his will there was a clause in it as follows: "All of my investments in the war loans of the Dominion of Canada amounting to $8,000 I give to Janet Crosbie." According to the terms of the will the balance of the estate goes to the House of Industry and Refuge of the County Orde presiding, the matter of of Industry and Refuge of the County of Wellington, and at the time of his death there was $10.000 invested in war death there was $10,000 invested in war loans, the country authorities contend that they should get it for the House of Industry. wenther an agreement was reached between the Grand Trunk and certain of its employees. It was afterwards alleged by the C. B. R. E. that these employees did not have authority to enter into an agreement with the company. Subsequently, the negotiations were reopened before the board.

In the majority report it is said that as far as the board is aware representatives of three organizations, who signed the agreement, have not repudiated their action.

The report sets forth that the employees signified their willingness to accept certain reductions, but that they contended the rate of 12.8 percent reduction was excessive.

The question before the board, the report states, was whether the reductions proposed were unjustifiable and excessive. These reductions conform to those made effective by order of the United States Railway Board on the railways of the United States.

to the development of Canada and the unity of our people

> HE original movement out of which the Crerar policy has developed, was set in motion by a group of grain traders in the West, headed by Wood, a Missourian, for the the sole purpose of controlling Western wheat. The main interest of both Crerar and Wood, is not the raising of, but the exploitation of wheat.

> As selfish interests were the foundation of the movement, so in its development selfishness continued to be its chief characteristic.

In fact, so selfish and dangerous has Crerar's policy become that a number of the men who originally took a leading part in the movement, men highly respected in farming communities, such public-spirited and patriotic men as Clark, Fletcher, Henders, Ferguson and others, have withdrawn from Crerar's group and have repudiated his plans as a step towards national suicide.

Crerar advocates everything for the special benefit of his group without regard to the great majority of the people and with no thought for the welfare of the Dominion as a whole.

He is committed to his group to destroy every vestige of the Tariff and introduce Free Trade-which would surely destroy the industries of our towns and cities, throwing many thousands of Canadian men and women out of work and driving them to the United States for a livelihood.

Crerar's policy presents Group Domination in a most menacing form, and as Fletcher said:-

"We must stamp out this system as we would deal with a dreaded disease and we have a right to expect the assistance of all people who respect Canadian institutions."
