Aldridge Snuffs Champs Out in Order in Last Round.

Associated Press Despatch Washington, Oct. 12.-The fury of the Pirate attack, hitherto somewhat of a fable, became a reality today for the first time in the world's series.

On the crest of it, the National league champions came back when their hopes seemed lost, knocked Stanley Coveleskie out of the box and captured the fifth out of the box and captured the fifth game of the championship struggle by a markin of 6 to 3, while the strong armed and stout hearted Vic Aldridge hurled his second triumph over the Senators in brilliant fashion.

It was a sensational comeback on the part of the Buccaneers, who had seemed headed for quick defeat after their third loss and shutout yesterday at the hands of Walter Johnson. Tonight, as warring forces departed for Pittsburg and the sixth game there tomorrow, there was a rosier hue to the Pirate cause.

there was a rosier hue to the Pirate case.

Bill McKechnie and his young stal-warts still must take the two straight games to gain the world's championship heights the club last held in 1909, for the count still gives the Senators the edge at three games to two, but their batting rampage today has brought a startling revival of Pittsburg hopes.

Four Hurlers Fall.

These hopes were further brightened by the wreckage that this savage Pirote attack left in the pitching ranks of the Senators. Four Washington moundsmen altogether felt the reckless blows of their young rivals, Zachary as well as Coveleskie being knocked out of the box, while Win Ballou and Fred Marberry were rushed out in an attempt to check the sweeping advance of the invaders in the last three innings.

Bucky Harris lost the play with his big ace, Coveleskie, and now faces his check the sweeping advance of the invaders in the last three innings.

Bucky Harris lost the piay with his big ace. Coveleskie, and now faces his fight for one more victory with a badly battered hurling staff. For tomorrow he must use either Alex Ferguson, who was credited with the third game victory after being walloped a bit, or Dutch Ruether, veteran southpaw and the only regular, who has not gone to the firing line, whereas the Pirates are supposed to be fatal to portsiders.

With this prospect it may be the issue will go to the limit of seven games with the final hopes of the Senators resting again on their great veteran, Walter Johnson, who finished his second victory yetserday with an injured right leg—in baseball parlance a "charley horse"—and would be taxing even his great strength and heart to win again with only two days' rest.

Big Guns Open.

win again with only two days' rest.

Big Guns Open.

Today before a big crowd of close to 35,000 that again included President and Mrs. Coolidge. Firate bats that had been silenced for the most part thus far broke through the barriers in the knowledge that defeat meant final elimination.

elimination.

Probably the major share of the throng came out to see Washington put the finishing touches to a second successive world's championship, which successive world's championship, which successive world's champions. But instead, they saw an aroused young Pirate crew with the glint of determination in their eyes, smash all before them in a succession of flery drives.

The first fan of the land, President Coolidge did not stay to see the whirl-toloidge did not stay to see the whirl-toloidge did not stay to see the whirl-toloidge did not stay to see the whirl-that it was Pittshurg's day.

For it was the third inning he had seen enough to convince him that it was Pittshurg's day.

For it was the third inning that first saw the onslaught in full swing, producing two runs that put the Pirates for the lead after Washington had gotten in the lead after Washington had gott

Away to a chief the score, but the National leaguers broke through in the seventh and were never headed after that.

ield stands, tied the seventh and were never headed after that.

Through the last three innings, the Pirates turned a close battle into a rout with an attack which found weapons long silent finally breaking down all barriers.

Cuyler, Barnhart and Wright—three men whose hitting prowess loomed large in the season's pennant triumph—found the range with consistent abandon for the first time in the series, and the Senators, reserves and all, could not hold them in check.

Moore, Traynor and McInnis, taking Grantham's place at first base, and playing regularly for the first time in his sixth world's series—also figured in various stages of the scoring fray. In fact, every member of the Pirate crew, except Aidridge himself, contributed at least one safe blow toward the total of thirteen gathered off the quartet of Washington twirlers.

Carried Full Share.

Aldridge's bat was not needed, however, and the big right-hander varried his full share of the laurels in the steady confidence and skilfulness with which he checked most of the threats of his formidable foes.

Barnhart was perhaps the biggest gon in the Buccaneer battery, for it was the hitherto unobtrusive left fielder who lit the match to the attacking configaration in the third inning when he drove in the first Pittsburg run; lashed out the decisive stroke when he scored Carey in the seventh with what proved to be the winning run, then completed his iob by bringing in the sixth and finally himself in the minth on the wings of Wright's drive off Marberry's pitching and Bluege's glove.

While he finally retired under this burrage Coveleskie paved the way for his downfall by his unsteadiness and lack of control.

The Pittsburg forecaster tonight

ack of control.

The Pittsburg forecaster tonight gave baseball fans little encouragement for the sixth game of the world's reries, scheduled to be playin the Smoky City tomorrow. A drizzling rain fell all day, and the weather observer said his maps indicated that the downfall would continue until tomorrow, with fair and cooler weather Wednesday.

Aldridge has put the "Vic" in victory to date.

The Limestone City took on more pallor than ever for minutes of that Queen's-Varsity game Saturday.

The 'I-Told-You-So-Brigade" were out in full force after yesterday's game, but none of them would bet on their belief that the series was fixed for Pirates to prolong it at least another game.

Kansas Aggies have introduced ultra-violet ray baths into their training. But even these rays won't warm through ossified skulls.

THE SERIOUS.

Five games of the series are over, and yet the public at large or the fans at the scene of combat have received anything tense in the way of thrills. Walter Johnson's victory in the first game is the high light to date-the only act to catch and hold the popular imagination. Aldridge won his second game, but that just happens to be all in the day's work. Protests which have been filed in this series leave the fans somewhat cold and not engaged in red-hot controversy as they would have been in other series.

And yet lacking all heroics, world series games still have their thrills as a spectacle either on the field or in front of playographs, or as read in extras. And they will always have them.

EXPERIENCE TEACHES.

In lining up Saturday night's boxing bill at the arena, judgment has been shown in giving local interest a chance to assert itself in ocal boys. High-priced international stars such as Ryan appearing in London always calls forth some skepticism. If the fans do not become suspicious of the motives of these stars in hitting London, they are justified in fearing that the match will be an unequal one, and therefore uninteresting. In Saturday night's card, both the main go and semi-final outs bring boys of reputation into action, but they are boys to whom a defeat means something. Vincent might be bantamweight champion of Canada, but for the fact that he is learning a new style of fighting. and he has still some of it to learn. Slavin was a picturesque figure in Old London in the early '90's. It was Slavin who accompanied the late Col. Boyle, formerly of Woodstock, to Alaska in the famous rush of '98.

An old Yukoner related to the writer, the advent of the two into Dawson. Slavin who was in partial retirement was to give a boxing exhibition, but as the card fell through for one reason and another, it looked as if the money in the house would have to be returned. It was then that Slavin and Boyle, who was later to become one of the big men of a land of big men and personalities, and later still was to play a romantic role on the bigger stage of Europe during the world war decided that they'd keep the money. Both had musical knack, and gave such a fine extemporary program that the fight audience forgot all about fighting and their pokes of gold in the box office.
