

Canada

Sarsaparilla

benefit from aparilla
dicine

been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for months for nervousness, and after second bottle I felt benefited. Being I did not seem to get any better. A friend advised me to get a bottle of Sarsaparilla, and instead of getting on I am very glad I did, because I feel as well as I did a year ago. I nearly finished my sixth bottle. It is an excellent medicine. I wish you knew. Mrs. JAMES BURNS BLAIR, 31 West, East, Toronto, Ont.

By Experience that Hood's is Best.

My 32nd year. About 16 years ago I took Sarsaparilla, and have no hesitation in saying that Hood's is the only best. For the past 16 years I have used Hood's exclusively, and attribute health to its use. I have suffered from it more than have been entirely free from it for years past. Mrs. HENRY F. BURNS, Toronto, Ont.

John Atkins
My wife, sends us the following: "I am glad to give this testimonial as Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I feel very much with Dyspepsia
I am taking medicine for 25 years and I find nothing to do me as good as Sarsaparilla. Every symptom of the disease entirely disappears, and I feel no more of the medicine too highly, or sleep better and feel stronger than many years. I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla bought of Mr. Sear's drugstore." JOHN ATKINS.

Radial Endorsement
Mr. Sanderson, the Druggist,
and Co., Lowell, Mass.
Mr. Atkins to be a strictly honest, upright man, and take much pleasure in the truth of the testimonial here. I may also add that I know from observation that Mr. Atkins has done much benefit from using Hood's Sarsaparilla. E. G. SANDERSON, Druggist, Queen Mary, Ont.

WOMAN'S AGENCY, LTD.
LONDON, ENGLAND.
GALPIN,
ALTON,
WALTER.
has been merged in the Company from this Agency.
New Rates
on Easy Terms.
its received at interest.
S. MASON,
ELLIAND.

SITES!

ice—all sizes, from first-class work at

company, issuing a nd, or if you want
a visiting card up

ONIST,
VICTORIA, B. C.

CAPITAL NOTES.

The Customs Have No Intimation of B. C. Sealers Transferring Their Allegiance.

Str. "Quadra" to Take Mr. Macoun to the Fribylof Islands to Report.

Captain Lewis to Be Registrar of Shipping—Senator Macdonald and the Governorship.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
OTTAWA, April 30.—A hitch has arisen in connection with the transfer of the steamer Sir James Douglas to the Provincial authorities, and she may not be transferred. Several tenders for the purchase of the vessel have been received, the lowest being about $5,000.

Senator Macdonald's friends are working strenuously in his behalf for the Lieut. Governorship of the Province.

Hon. David Mills says the Redistribution bill violates every principle of popular representation. The Liberals will fight it tooth and nail. They want the Governor-General to interfere. The British Columbia members say that if the boundary can be agreed upon Westminister may be divided. The idea of two members is not palatable.

Under the proposed redistribution, it would appear that Ontario will have 92 members, and Quebec 65, as before, hers being the pivot point; Nova Scotia 20, instead of 21 members; New Brunswick 14, instead of 16; Prince Edward Island 6, instead of 5; Manitoba 7, instead of 5. The Territories will be untouched.

Commissioner Farnelle says that no information has been received in the Department that certain British Columbia sealers intend obtaining foreign registers for the purpose of evading the provisions of the modus vivendi.

The Quadra has been ordered to be ready on May 6th to conduct Mr. Macoun to the Fribylof Islands, but the vessel will remain on the islands for several weeks, for the purpose of making comparative observations of seal life in the various bays, and the observations of last year as to seal life are borne out this season.

It is understood an item appears in the Supplementary Estimates for a $1,000 gratuity to Captain Lewis on his retirement from the agency of the Marine Department to assume the position of Registrar of Shipping for Victoria.

In the House last evening, after a long and desultory talk on West India trade and the Spanish treaty, the House again went to sleep, and spent the evening in the discussion of the immigration bill.

An Imperial Order in Council has been passed granting appeals to the Privy Council from the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, in Manitoba. The amount involved must exceed $200, and the security must be $500 for the prosecution of an appeal.

The Redistribution Bill gives Manitoba the following constituencies: Winnipeg, Selkirk, Marquette, Macdonald and Brandon. Macdonald constituency is named in honor of the late Premier.

It is probable the session will be a long one.

TORONTO TOPICS.

The Globe Threatened by Newspaper Women Suffrage.—To Prevent the Importation of Chinese Girls.

TORONTO, April 30.—The Globe, to-day, published the fac simile of a number of receipts given by Sir Adolphe Caron to Hon. Thomas McGreevey for sums towards election funds in 1881, and says: "Should the House, on Wednesday, resolve to burk the enquiry, it will be a disgraceful precedent. Mr. Edgar has asserted, to resort to trial by newspaper. Then the whole story will be told in those columns."

Next Wednesday two petitions, each signed by 18,000 Canadian women representing every province but Manitoba, and asking that the franchise be given to women, will be laid before the House of Commons and Senate.

The Women's Auxiliary of Missions, in convention here, yesterday, resolved to petition the Government to amend the laws, so as to prevent the importation into British Columbia of Chinese girls for immoral purposes.

The body of an unknown middle-aged woman, poorly dressed, was found in the Don river, this morning. The police are investigating.

CANADIAN.

Disappearance of a Montreal Lawyer—Fire at Omeaux, Ont.—Brandon Centre Nomination.

MONTREAL, April 30.—Duncan McCormick, a well known Montreal lawyer, has disappeared. He is believed to have gone to the United States.

OMEAUX, Ont., April 30.—Last night a fire started in Sheppard's building, in an easterly direction. Thirteen buildings were destroyed; loss heavy.

CANTWRIGHT, Man., April 30.—The body of Alfred, who was lost, has been recovered. WINDSOR, April 30.—Hon. Mr. Smart and W. A. McDonald have been nominated in Brandon Centre as Liberal and Conservative candidates respectively.

YANKEE SCARE.

Talk of U. S. Establishments near Lake Champlain and on Puget Sound.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 30.—The Bulletin, this evening, says: "The Government proposes to establish two new military posts, one at Ronse's Point, at the foot of Lake Champlain, and the other probably on Puget Sound. The military authorities believe that in case of war with England the first attack would be somewhere in the neighborhood of Lake Champlain. That has been the military route between Canada and this country since the early colonial days. The French and Indians used it for their raids on the New York and New England frontier settlements of Massachusetts and Crown Point, on the upper part of the lake, were their advance posts. General Burrows attempted an invasion by that line during the revolution, and Sir George Prevost, in the winter of 1812, had a post at Ronse's Point, with all the necessary facilities for the concentration and distribution of troops would be useful for defence, but it would be still more useful for attack. It is hardly to be supposed that the United States would stand on the defensive or its Northern frontier. A post somewhere on Puget Sound would be equally useful. It would be quick work, with the proper facilities, to isolate British Columbia from the rest of the Dominion. It was the mistake of the nation's lifetime to give up our contention for the line of 54 degrees, 40 minutes. Some time, and somehow, it will have to be regained, presumably by peaceful means. But for that mistake, the Chinese question would now be nearly settled, instead of getting another year's uneasy peace. On general principle, a growing maritime frontier community like Puget Sound should have a military post."

DRAYTON-BORROWE.

Another Version of the Case—What Mrs. Milbank Has to Say.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Daldiel's cable news, special from Paris, says: Interest in the duel fought between Duce de Moray and Harry Vane Milbank has increased during the day, especially when an attempt was made to get a statement from the former, but the yacht on which he is left at Ostend, and consequently it is impossible to discover his whereabouts. A reporter called to-day upon the wife of the other party to the duel, Mrs. Milbank, who talked freely on the Drayton-Borrowe scandal. She said: "I think four parties have been given in the newspapers. Some months ago Mr. Drayton, who was at that time in the U. S., and reason to believe that his wife's honor had been sacrificed by Borrowe. Without troubling himself about her admirer, Mr. Drayton made his wife sign a confession of guilt and a promise to furnish the amount of $24,000 a year, half to be used for himself and the other half for his children, and undertaking, at the same time, to take care of Mrs. Borrowe and her daughter, the late millionaire's wife, Mrs. Ator, she was well able to provide the money. Directly after this Mr. Drayton left London with his wife and family, and Mrs. Borrowe remaining in the United States, but Mr. Drayton, not content with securing the money, taunted his wife that her lover was contending himself with some one else and had forced all about her. This aroused the tigress in her nature, and, mad with rage at his taunts, she called on Mr. Borrowe, telling him to come to London immediately. Mr. Borrowe needed no second invitation, and was soon in London. Here Mr. Drayton again surprised the wife in a hotel together. The outraged husband pretended to be unable to condone the repeated offence, and determined on revenge. A duel was arranged to take place in France, and the antagonists came to Paris. My husband consented to be one of Mr. Borrowe's seconds, as he took a great deal of interest in his wife's case. My husband did not particularly wish a fight with Mr. Drayton, my husband conceived the idea of referring the case to arbitration, and with this object view his husband explained the circumstances too much in his friend's favor. At any rate, he and Mr. Fox, the other second, decided, on the strength of the evidence, to refer the case to arbitration. My husband was attacked by two men, who endeavored to take his rifle. The entry touched an electric bell communicating with the guards, and they started to the scene. Paris, April 30.—In consequence of the receipt of letters threatening to blow up the Bourne, the Government has decided to close yesterday. A bomb with a half-burned fuse attached was found in the Rue Fleuries and two loaded bombs were found in the Church of St. Germain. The structure at Esport was burned yesterday, the fire being attributed to anarchists. Walter Hero, who informed the police of the explosion, was arrested. The police arrested at Esport a number of anarchists, and expelled from France three anarchists being arrested at Choisy-le-Roi. The police arrested at Esport a number of anarchists, and expelled from France three anarchists being arrested at Choisy-le-Roi. The police arrested at Esport a number of anarchists, and expelled from France three anarchists being arrested at Choisy-le-Roi.

CELEBRITY DISCIPLINE.

British Ministerial Measure to Deal with Immoral Clergymen.

LONDON, April 28.—The Clergy Discipline bill, contemplating the degradation from their calling of clergymen found guilty of immorality, came up for its second reading in the House of Commons, this evening. The object of the bill is to enable the Government to deal summarily, as is now impossible, with such preachers in the established church as have been guilty of immoral acts, such as lascivious and adulterous relations with parishioners. Mr. Hon. Mr. Balfour, in moving the second reading, alluded to the scandals which had disgraced the Church recently, and said that the present bill was practically useless. The present bill did not deal with questions of doctrine, but with immoral acts, such as lascivious and adulterous relations with parishioners. The bill, he said, had shown such a measure to be imperative. Several Radicals denounced the framers of the bill for omitting the offenses of bishops from the provisions of the penal clauses, arguing that the bishops also had shown themselves not above sin.

Supposed Smuggling Sleep.

PORT ANGELES, April 28.—A sleep was picked up off Edith Hook this morning. She is about four tons and is evidently British, and is supposed to have been in the military stores between Canada and this country since the early colonial days. The French and Indians used it for their raids on the New York and New England frontier settlements of Massachusetts and Crown Point, on the upper part of the lake, were their advance posts. General Burrows attempted an invasion by that line during the revolution, and Sir George Prevost, in the winter of 1812, had a post at Ronse's Point, with all the necessary facilities for the concentration and distribution of troops would be useful for defence, but it would be still more useful for attack. It is hardly to be supposed that the United States would stand on the defensive or its Northern Seattle, April 29.—A telegram has been received by E. O. Graves, Vice-President of the Chamber of Commerce, from Senator Watson C. Squire, stating that dispatches regarding the sailing of a vessel from Seattle in Puget Sound had been laid before the Navy Department, and that such vessels as are cruising in these waters had been ordered to obtain their coal supplies at Point Roberts.

MAY DAY.

"No God! No Law! No Property!"
The Burthen of Anarchism in Hyde Park.

Over a Quarter of a Million People Expected to Be Present To-Day.

Preparations All Over the Continent to Prevent Rioting and Bloodshed.

LONDON, April 30.—"No God; no law; no property! Remember Chicago!" will be the cry of the Anarchists, at Hyde Park, on Sunday. A half-dozen roughly printed posters, with these words in bold letters upon them, have been torn from the walls by the police, in the East End, and futile efforts are being made to find out who put up the lawless mottoes. The Scotland Yard officials are anxiously engaged in the work of assigning the various bodies of police to duty for Sunday, and scattering them in different parts of the park, to be in and around the park to listen to speeches in favor of the eight-hour day as the most important step toward the ultimate freedom of the workmen, and urging Parliament to pass a law. Nearly 100 Anarchists are said to have arrived in London, but revolutionists declare that the greater portion of the report sent to the continental press concerning doings of refugees in London is false. Orders have been issued to have all the troops stationed in London ready for any emergency, which means that the entire force of guards will be kept under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot. It is not possible, however, to keep them under arms all day. The London rioter has little consideration for the police, who do not draw their batons, save under exceptional circumstances, but takes to his heels at the sight of the soldiers, for whom he has a wholesome respect. A police inspector said this evening: "The only source of apprehension is that 400 or 500 foreign Anarchists, who have sought refuge on English shores, may incite their British brethren to riot