The help that I shall take home will be oil title, Faith had said, to herself the man to be the part of the man to had I shall twenth the faith before me so much, that I shall twenthird class. How thoroughly my one tempt at being useful and helpful has fail; the thorough you can get and the children, who along had gone tesse her off, knew no difference, and hovered round it, looking in enviously, because it contained the girl who had been so kind and loving a friend to them.

At Aderllyn Junction Faith pranon had to stop and wait for another, main, and here she was puzzled and beytidered, no axious attentive porce on a centre of the common one in charge as the special and the church with we charge to variable more mineral to the seement of the present accounts. The his case carriage, while she stood beside more than the same and recognised her she felt quite sure, also. Up and down he passanger she felt quite sure also. Up and down he passanger she felt guite sure, also. Up and down he passanger she felt guite sure, also, the product of the same train. That he as wand recognised her she felt quite sure, and the second.

'What class, em?' inquired the porter, when the returned from taking her luggage to the van. And Faith answered him a voice which unconaciously she made very clear and distinct; then Glowed him a voice which unconaciously she made very clear and distinct; the followed him a voice which unconaciously she made very clear and distinct; the followed him a voice which unconaciously she made very clear and distinct; the followed him a voice which unconaciously she made very clear and distinct; the followed him a voice which unconaciously she made very clear and distinct; the followed him and took her seat, while vo it moved on.

'I forgot to put my letter in the post-bag,' said Faith, lightly, but trembling very much as she stood in the dismal gloom of the station and felt Victor so close beside her, 'so no one expects me.'

'You wish for a cab then?'

'I do, Mr. Glendower,' she laughed, with a nervous effort which he plainly read, 'but the wish cannot bring me sone.'

Yes. Will you bring my luggage on to the cottage, Hearn, when your work is over for to-day? Good night, Mr. Glen-

Again he kept his hand beside him when Again he kept his hand beside him when she offered hers, and blushing hotly, Faith turned away. But, keeping measure with her footsteps, he turned too, and together they walked slowly down the dasky road. Such a slow, silent walk it was in the deep-effing gloom and solitude, while Faith wondered and wondered—not what he would think of the little cottage they would reach by-and-by, nor why he had chosen that day and time to come on his long talked of visit to Brandon, but whether, after they had parted now for the last time and she had left his life for ever, he would come to forgive her in his heart.

When the park gates of Brandon came within sight at last, Faith stopped as if it were an understeed thing that they should have a country photographer."

The next appeared in a London newspaper, under the head of 'For Sale.' Pianofortes—cottage—seven octaves—the property of a lady leaving England in a remarkably elegant case on beautifully arved supporters."

And what does this mean? "Business chance—to be disposed of—a genuine fried the genuineness apply to the fish, the business, or the way in which they are fried? And one's mind gets bopelessly dazed over the advertisement off-ring a large reward for "A large Spanish blue gentle-

'Can you see that little cottage beyond the firs? she asked, simply. 'I think you can just see its low, dim outline. That is where we live, Mr. Glendower; and this is Branden.'

Something—more in the tone than the words—made the implied comprison plain to Victor Glendower.

I know,' he answered, quietly, showing that he understood her—'I have known it for a long time.'

'Good-bye, Mr. Glendower,' she said. 'You will not touch my hand, I know; but you will say good-bye for the last time.'

Even in the imperfect darkness he could see a little of the great tremulous wonder in her face. And then, because it looked so small and pale, and because it was so pure and true, despite the memory of that repented false-hood; and because he had failed so signally in his long effort to believe it a face he did not care for; and because he found that, through that long efforts it had been growing only more and more dear to him; and because he had been to blame, and his own pride had been to blame, and his own and the forence of the distint columns of fire distint colu

READY-MADE CLOTHING and Gents' Furnishing Goods, Of the Newest Styles and most Economical

A young New York married man, travelling in Kansas, recently received the despatch; "Return immediately.
—you are a father." On the eve of his return, his lady friends determined to play a joke on him, procured from the neighborhood three other babies, placed all four in a row on a bed in an adjoining apartment, and covered them up.—When he arrived, he embraced his wife in great delight, and was then led forth to behold the first-born. When the cover was raised, an indiscribable look of surprise over-spread his countenance, as he exclaimed: "Gracious! Did any of them get away?"
