

Thomas Williams, having served his own people, the British and American governments, died in his native village, August 16, 1849. In person he was above the common size, with a countenance manly and speaking with intelligence. In his politics he was a strenuous republican, and by attaching himself to the American cause, in the war of 1812, he lost the graces of the British government in the Canadas. The functionaries in the Indian depart-church, with no other aid but a staff. She was apparently a full blooded Indian, tall and slender, but little bowed with age, and still able to attend to her domestic duties. She was a devout Catholic, and spoke no language but Mohawk. She has since died.—ED.

---