Other firms were war favorites and nothing else, and they will simply drop out. Altho there may have been little in the mechanical training a person received in a shell shop that would fit that person for machine work after, there is another side to the matter. Those who have worked for some years in shell shops have become accustomed to working to very fine dimensions. They have learned to do things within a ten thousandth of an inch of being absolutely correct, and this training is not going to be lost. The shell shop workers will carry a lot of it into other lines, and in that will come the Canada withket than, she ever
