Empire—Debate of Second

Reading of Peace Treaty-

London, July 21.-Premier Lloyd George replied to his critics in the debate on the second reading of the Georman peace treaty, and the Anglo-French convention. His recent announcement that the former German emperor would be tried before a tribunal in London had created much discussion, and several members, including Lord Robert Cecil, expressed doubts as to the advisability of the trial being held in London. The selection of a neutral country for this purpose, it has been contended, would

The Irish Question.

Another matter of extreme importance, which came up for discussion was the Irish question, and to this the promoter devoted considerable time. With numerous interjections by Jos. Devlin, Nationalist for Falls division, of Belfast.

Sir Samuel Hoare. Unionist for Chelsea, warned the government that some of the Unionists considered the settlement of the Irish difficulty just as urgent as did the Irish members. The premier caused laughter by describing the Irish convention, which had failed to agree in its attempt to apply President Wilson's principles to Ireland.

Answering Mr. Devlin's demand for a referendum, he urged that the difficulty for the premier when he proposed the the allied generals, said:

M. "Working men are given good working and living conditions and unemployment has ceased to exist," he said.

The population, M. Gavrilov said, is united in the struggle against anarchy. "The world begins to understand," he said, "that Bolshevism is not merely a Russian phenomenon, but an international danger."

The Cossacks," said Col. Berezov-T. P. O'Connor Protests.

T. P. O'Connor, Nationalist, expressed profound disappointment over the premier's speech. He asked whether Mr. Lloyd George meant to withdraw from his contract with regard to Ireland. He declared that two men had created the Sinn Fein; one was Six Edward Carson, the other was Mr. Edward Carson, the other was Mr. Lloyd George.

What was the good of the premier talking about German perfidy in breakink the treaty with regard to Belgium, when he himself was breaking his contract? President Wilson, he added, must have told the premier that good relations between America and England were impossible if Irishmen remained unreconciled.

The Debate Opened.

There is a natural prejudice against trading with Germany, Sir Donald MacLean said in opening the debate, but he added that he could not see how the allies could recover an indemnity unless they traded with her each other as we all have been, the demnity unless they traded with her. He said he regretted that the mace terms should in themselves prevent Germany from giving immediate reparation and making speedy payment of part of the indemnity.

Donald continued, "I agree absolutely that the ex-kaiser, who was responsible for some of the grossest acts of the war and who has been rejected by his own people, should be brought to a fair and solemn trial." Sir Donald suggested, however, that instead of trial being held in London it should take place in "relative obscurity in some neutral state."

After referring to the "seething cauldron" in the near east, Sir Donald said, "The one bright and shining hope of the whole picture is the league of nations."

John R. Clynes, former food controller; Geo. Nicoll Barnes, minister without portfolio; Lord Robert Cecil and other members continued the de-bate. Lord Robert Cecil spoke in favor of a renewal or the revision of the treaties when it became necessary, and expressed doubts as to the advisability of trying the former German emperor

The Unionist member for Chelsea, Col. Sir Samuel Hoare, created some-thing of a sensation by warning the government that there were a number of Unionist members who considered the settlement of the Irish difficulty just as urgent as did the Irish mem-

Premier Lioyd George, in replying, expressed gratification at the course the debate had taken and the spirit in which the treaty had been received. He believed this reflected the spirit of the great public outside.

The premier defended the AngloAmerican convention with France, which, he contended, was no proof of France's want of confidence in, nor any reflection upon, the league of nations. The league was in the nature of an experiment. He considered France justified in arguing, after the experience she had gone thru, that while she believes in that experiment and will do her utmost to promote its success, she thinks the league would have a better chance of establishing itself as a permanent organization if it St. John, N.B., July 21.—The sawmill has the British empire and the United
