these wide stretches of mileage. But when, last winter, Sir Robert Borden came to realize that herein lay a great and insistent task of national unification, and the decision of his government to come to the aid of the daily publishers of Canada was im-plemented by the inclusion by the minister of finance in his estimates, of a sum for that purpose, the path at once opened for the attainment of at once opened for the attainment of the present happy goal. The prime minister has honored the new ser-vice by a message over his own sig-nature. Other messages of congratu-lation, including one from E. F. Slack, president of the Canada Press Limits president of the Canada Press, Limit-ed, which are printed below, were exchanged over a great stretch of wire nearly five thousand miles, physically united Sydney, Cape Breton, with Vic-toria, Vancouver Island, and including n the one circuit, Halifax, Moncton, St. John, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London, the head of the Great Lakes, Winnipeg, the cities of the Pacific, Nelson in the Kootenay, work from which the greatest benefits should accrue, and in which they have should accrue, and in which they have should accrue, and in which they have in your best wishes for the success to without such an organization will be misunderstanding. A British Empire without such an organization will be a soft in one ear. It is my profound belief that the nationalization of the news service of the Canadian Press on the occasion of the inauguration of the occasion of the inauguration of the service, to send our warmest greetings to you and the people of British Columbia.

"The Canadian Press is to be congratulated upon establishing this great.
"The Canadian Press is to be congratulated upon establishing this great. "The Canadian Press is to be con-gratulated upon establishing this great national news service. I believe that it promises far-reaching benefits to all of Canada. This national wire will be a new link between east and will closer and warmer sympathy all sec-tions of our vast Dominion. I am sure that it will be largely influential in stimulating national co-operation, creating 3 better understanding of each other's problems, and fostering that spirit of unity which was never so essential to the welfare of our com-mon country as at the present moment."
