"You are right!" she said, after a pause, sile a ripple of quivering, mischlevous aghter leaped from her lips and she laid r hand lightly on his arm. "Oh, Ramblin'd, you are indeed an 'ig'rant, savage, ipid brute!' You are ag'rant'" she computed, while he looked at her with a zaied expression in his eyes, "of the ways a woman's heart; you are 'savage'—in e defense of a weman's honor; you are upid—not to see that it is the man a man wants and not the thin social neer; you are a 'brute'—an utter brute, mblin' Kid—to—to—make a girl almost 1 you—tell you—that she—she—"
The sontence was not finished.
He crushed her to him and stopped the rds on her lips.
He smothered her mouth with his own—ey drank each other in, their souls nigled in a mad sense-reeling, time-dening pressure of lips!

The goin' away," he said; "I'm goin' and the reason now. I'm goin' away and lee myself so you'll never have a chance be ashamed of me! I'm goin' away and the myself so you'll never have a chance be ashamed of me! "No wish that I can express can measure the depth of my esteem for your or my desire for your welfare and your glory. And farewell the many dear friends I have made, and the tens of thousands who, for the reason that I was the representative of a noble nation and a storied appealing cause, gave me an honor they denied to the prince. You will not need to be assured that Ireland will not forget and that Ireland will not be ungrateful."

His Advantures in U. S.

His Adventures in U. S. Foilowing his mysterious escape from prison in England, de Valera appeared in Paris in February, 1919, and a month later was notified of his election as "President of the Irish Republic." He again, appeared in Ireland and attended the "Sinn Fein parliament." A few days later he left Erin supposedly on a mission to England.

De Valera's whereabouts continued a mystery until June 23, 1919, when he suddenly appeared in this country and took a luxurious suite at the Waldorf-Actoria here, to begin an appeal for funds in behalf of the "Irish Republic." He also started a campaign to bring about the recognition of the "republic" by the United States.

De Valera suddenly disappeared on June 3, 1920, but a day or so later appeared in Chicago, where the Republican national convention was in progress, and triged the introduction of an Irish plank into the platform. Falling to gain recognition by the Republicans, he went to the Democratic national convention at San Francisco, but his plank also was rejected there.

If the bylaw on a recreation ground for Mimico is not carried today it will not be for lack of boosting by the Union Jack chapter of the I.O.D.E., Mimico. This organization is strong on the subject of a playground for the children and grown-ups of the district, and within the past week have engineered an energetic campaign in support of the bylaw authorizing the purchase of a gite for a public park. Literatures distributed by the chapter points out that Mimico is the only place in Ontario without a publicly-gwned park and that the whole cost to the town of such a recreation ground will be only $15,000, which could be paid for in debentures spread over thirty years. The chapter has donated $6000 in cash towards the cost of purchase of the proposed recreation grounds, and their idea is to make the park a memorial to the boys of the district who lost their lives overseas.
