Mr. Whitney's appearance was the signal for continued applause. His speech was effective politically. He referred at some length to the policy of the party, paying particular attention to agriculture, finance, education and general administration of the crown lands department in the event of success. He dealt with the statement made by the premier, to the enect that no measures of importance were introduced by the opposition, pointing out that it was the duty of the opposition, to criticize rather than to construct.

He also referred to the offers made by the government for a coalition, stating something further to present in explantion of the government for a coalition, stating was pleased to say there was a surplus that at the proper time he would have something further to present in explantion of the position taken at that time. He said that the record of the government had been one of disgrace the record and next year it would seed the city could run the line cheaper than the company, with letter satisfaction to the citizens. It could not be worse. The Toronto Rail to could not be was an extra to overflowing. He was the course that was the closing here and seeing the large audience; but coming here and seeing the surplement of the success. A short time satisfaction to the citizens. It could not be worse. The Toronto Rail to could not be weeks.

He had been retitived

bonest administration and asserted his determination, if successful, to uphold all that made for good in legislation and redeem the credit of the provinc.

His tribute to the worth and integrity of the Conservative candidate in Peel met with an enthusiastic response from the audience. In conclusion he said:

There were about 500 guests. The officers of the Toronto, London and Brantford regiments, with their lady friends, were among those invited. The decorations were on a scale even more claporate than usual. The bare waits and rafters of the drill hall were covered with red, white and blue bunting. The hall was divided, as last year, by a partition representing a fort. At the east end was used for dancing. A west end was used for dancing. A cannon draped with flags was stadoned at each corner of the space roped off for dancing. Bunting and strings of colored electric lights were festooned from the centre of the ceiling. The gaileries and walls were also tastefully draped. On the north wall was the regimental badge worked out with eolored lights. The company armories were made into cosy sitting-out rooms, Some of the trophies won by the regiment were set out at the west end of the hall.
