SET GOOD EXAMPLE

Young Men Working Industiously in King Edward Night School.

If all young men and working boys in the city who have not had the full advantage of school studies could have seen what Doctor Spangler and the editor of The Times saw last evening in Principal Cornier's room in the King Edward school they would surely be encouraged to get into the game of self-improvement. Mr. Cornier had a large class of boys and young men, all eagerly at work. They were clean and bright looking fellows, every one adding to his store of useful knowledge. Mr. Cornier has seventy of them in two classes, which meet on different evenings, and they are making excellent progress. It goes without saying that these students will make good citizens, steady, industrious, and ambitious to improve themselves and their surroundings. There should be many more such classes in the evenings in this city.
