AMUSEMENTS IN ST. JOHN; WHAT THE PLAYHOUSES OFFER

UNIQUE.

Notwithstanding the fact that the weather of last evening suggested any thing but indoor amusement, a very large number were attracted to the Unique Theatre by the announcement that Hugh Conway's greatest novel, Called Back, would be pictured by the Theatre Co. as a special feature. Unusual is the word to describe this play, not only the main events in this story, but the entire production. A new dramatic situation is not often brought forward, but in this very different picture the whole motive is out of the ordinary. It follows Mr. Conway's idea most faithfully, while the excellent acting of Miss Flo La Balle and Jas. Bruce makes it even a greater success perhaps than it would be enacted by other artists.

This, however, was only one of the good things offered in last evening's programme. A real gem in motion photography, re-freshing and altogether a novelty was Freemont's dainty domestic comedy, A Household Treasure. The art of the colored photographer is admirably exploited in the last scene, especially which shows several children's heads peeping through a bar of music.

To lend variety a pleasing study of his majesty the king landing at Weymouth is presented, which, combined with the patriotic interest centered around the recent visit of the duke, makes it a most timely and delightful picture. The same programme will be presented this afternoon and evening.

LA MARQUISE de FONTENOY

Cincinnati Man to Marry a Countess—Appointment for General Lytton of Ladysmith Fame

(Copyright, 1912, by the Greenwood Co.)

Countess Camilla Hoyos, whose engagement to Charles Wilkins Short, Jr., of 144 East Macmillan street, Walnut Hill, Cincinnati, has just been announced by cable from London and whose marriage is to take place there in November, is half English, has been a frequent visitor to the United States, and has often been entertained in the White House by ex-ambassadors and Mrs. Choate.

Her mother is the daughter of Robert Hoyos, inventor of the torpedo, and the famous torpedo. The great torpedo was invented at Flume, on the Austrian coast of the Adriatic, and it was while the late Count George Hoyos, as captain in the Austrian army, was employed to supervise the fitting of a large order for his government, that he met and married Miss Alice Whitehead, heiress of her father's great fortune. Her children have all been brought up as Protestants, while the rest of the Hoyos family are strict Catholics.

Although the widowed Countess George Hoyos has seven children, of whom Camilla is the youngest, the latter has a considerable allowance from her mother, and should eventually receive a good portion of her grandfather's wealth. Countess Camilla, a tall, handsome woman, with blue eyes and flaxen hair, is very charmingly engaged to Samuel Pepps Cockerell, of the English foreign office, but broke off the engagement within a fortnight of the date appointed for the wedding. She was born in the late of 1847, thirty-two years ago, and is therefore considerably older than her American fiancé, who graduated at Hamilton College in 1908.

She brought up almost entirely in England, and has always made her home there, owing to her disadvantageous position in Austria, where, on account of her bourgeois birth of her English mother, she is barred as an Austrian woman from presentation at the Viennese court.

This is in accordance with the regulations which strictly require that every candidate for presentation shall possess an ancestry purely noble on both paternal and maternal sides for four generations back; in other words, sixteen noble great-grandparents, making sixteen quarters of noble blood in the family shield.

It is a peculiar anomaly, that while she is thus denied admission to the court of Vienna, she is consequently the heiress of the Austrian capital, as an Austrian subject, she will be qualified for presentation there by the American ambassador as Mrs. Short, wife of an American citizen.

One of the countess's sisters is the widow of Prince Herbert Bismarck, son of Germany's Iron Chancellor; another is married to Count Ludwig Plehan, former German minister at Athens, while a third, Lillian, is wedded to Count Adolf Reventlow, chamberlain of the German emperor, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who is noted for his anglophobia.

The Hoyos family is of Spanish origin, and came to Germany in the train of Emperor Charles V. Indeed, the original house of Hoyos still flourishes in the peninsula, and for a number of years the Marquis Hoyos of Madrid was Spanish ambassador to the court of Vienna.

The Austrian branch of the family were created barons of the empire in 1847 and counts a hundred years later. The head of the house, Count Ernest, is a member of the Austrian House of Lords, and a very distant cousin of Countess Camilla. Any other distant cousin was the late Count Ladislaus Hoyos, for many years Austrian envoy at Washington, where his eldest son was born, receiving among other names that of Columbus. This son, on returning to his native land, and in a manhood, returned to the United States as secretary of the Austrian mission, which in the meantime had been raised to an embassy.

The general the Right Hon. Sir Neville Lytton, G.C.B., has just been appointed to succeed the late Field Marshal Sir George White, the defender of Ladysmith, as governor of the Royal Hospital of Chelsea, in London. All who visit Paris make a point of seeing the "Pavilion des Invalides"—the home for invalided veterans of France's wars—but there are few who take the trouble to take in the corresponding institution of England, though it is well worth seeing, built as it was, from the designs of Sir Christopher Wren, by Charles II. In obedience, it is said, to the desire of his favorite, the orange-girl, Nell Gwyn.

The grounds are very extensive, and include the former Ranelagh Gardens, which throughout the eighteenth century and during the early years of the nineteenth, were the rendezvous of the London great world—and of its half-world as well. The governorship of this institution is invariably held by a field-marshal, or a general with plenty of war service to his credit, and carries with it a salary of $10,000 a year, advances of almost as much more, an altogether palatial residence within the hospital precincts, and last, but not least, a full pay continuation on the active list of the army, irrespective of age, until death.

Not that Sir Neville needs the money; for he is very rich, having inherited four years ago a large fortune from Charles Percival Noel of Bell Hall, near Mountbridge, the last male representative of the noble branch of that ancient house, The Earl of Gainsborough in the line of the Marquis of Ely. The family estates of the Noels of Bell Hall adjoined those of the Lyttons, and for generations the intimacy between the two neighboring families was extremely close. Charles Noel had no children and with his wife devoted on the occasion of their golden wedding in 1868, to bequeath all his property to Sir Neville.

The general is a brother of Lord Colman, of the Right Hon. Alfred Lytton, who was secretary of state for the colonies in the last Unionist administration, and of Canon Lytton, the head master of Eton. The Lytton brothers, and there are no less than eight of them—are nephews of the "Grand Old Man," their mother having been the youngest sister of the late Mrs. Gladstone. Their father, Liberal statesman, married the two sisters of Sir Stephen Lytton on the same day and in the same church. Seven Lytton family, and one of them, the Hon. Mary, died in 1875, on the very eve of her marriage to Arthur Balfour, the former Unionist premier.

Her fiancé was inconceivable. He placed the wedding ring on her dear finger, and has remained true to her memory to this day.

General Lytton has achieved fame not only as a soldier, but as an athlete and a sportsman. He was on the Eton cricket eleven, and had he not adopted a military career, would doubtless have become as

A Suggestion or Two
by RUTH CAMEROOT

"To take all my work that I possibly can outdoors, and to bring outdoors in to me as much as possible" is the spring and summer motto of the lady-who-always-knows-somewhere.

Every pleasant morning—and pleasant means every morning when it is not actually raining—I see her out on her back porch sewing, preparing vegetables, baking a cake, or doing any other task which can by any possibility be attended to there.

In the spring and summer she does all her ironing out of doors, and when she has much stitching to do she has her sewing machine brought out on the porch.

Bringing outdoors indoors means, of course, having all the windows open as much as possible.

The lady-who-always-knows-somewhere is very well and strong. She gives much of the credit to the plentiful supply of fresh air with which she enlivens her household duties.

It seems to me that a great many housewives might with advantage follow her lead in this.

It has been a habit of mine since leaving school and even before that, to write one of my reader-friends, "when I came across a quotation or a thought beautifully expressed that I felt would help me, to write it down and put it where I could see it very often, for instance on my dresser, until I had memorized it. This has been such a wonderful help to me that I wanted you to suggest it to your readers. Now I am a 'business woman' and I find it even more useful. Sometimes that one verse or thought will occur to me again and again during the day, and of course it cannot help but benefit me. Very often it is a real inspiration when I become discouraged.

Then, too, I believe in passing these thoughts on. I often copy one off and send it to some girl I know would enjoy it."

I am very glad indeed to pass along this suggestion, for I do not believe there is one of us who has not been helped at least once, most of us many times, by remembering some inspiring sentiment in a moment of storm and stress, or a time of difficult decision.

We all approve of laying by material wealth for a rainy day. Surely it is also well to lay by mental and spiritual wealth for the stormy day of depression or sorrow or temptation.

I thoroughly recommend my letter-friend's idea. Don't just read and admire the helpful bit of poetry or striking sentiment. Perhaps you think you will remember it from one reading, and maybe you will for tomorrow, but the day after tomorrow it will probably be gone. Cut it out or copy it and put it on your desk or your dresser or over your ark any place where you will half unconsciously read-it a dozen times a day. Keep it there until it becomes an integral part of your grey matter, almost as unforgettable as your name.

In this way, and in this way only, can you make it really your own and be sure of its help when you most need it.

WHAT HAPPENED TO FATHER?

"I hardly knew your father to-day," said the district visitor pleasantly to the little girl. "He's cut his beard off again. That's three times since a year ago." The little girl explained: "It ain't father done it. Father likes his beard on, but murrer's stuffin' the sofa."

THE ABERDEEN PLAYGROUNDS SEASON ENDS

Two Events of Interest There Yesterday—Letter From Duchess of Connaught—Children's Fine Work

The Aberdeen playground was formally closed yesterday afternoon and there was a grand concert in the evening. There was a fairly large attendance of ladies in the afternoon, and they greatly admired the display of basketry and handicrafts work. A group of the children paused in their play long enough to sing two patriotic songs and go through a very pretty flag drill. The children and their elders were then all called together and the following letter received from Miss Melick yesterday, was read to them—

H. M. C. S. Earl Grey, E. John, Aug. 19, 1912.

Dear Miss Peters—H. H. the Duchess of Connaught asks me to write to tell you how delighted she is with those very charming baskets, and how glad she is to accept them from the children of the public playground. Will you be so kind as to tell the children who made them how much the duchess admires their work?

Her royal highness is pleased to think that the children of St. John are being taught such useful and artistic occupations and wishes them every success in the future. Believe me,

Yours truly,
EVELYN PELLY.

Lady-in-Waiting.

It was recalled that when Earl and Lady Grey were here several years ago the latter was presented with some little samples of the children's work, and that later in Toronto she told Miss Peters that these articles had a place in her cabinet of souvenirs of Canada.

Miss Peters was present yesterday afternoon, with Dr. Margaret Parks and Mrs. A. M. Redding of the Playground Association, Mrs. G. A. Kurling, Inspector McLean and G. S. Humbert of the Every Day Club, who kept the grounds open every evening during the holidays.

In the evening fully a thousand people crowded the grounds and nearly streets to enjoy a concert given by St. Mary's Band. Most of the crowd was made up of children, but there were many older folk. Among the visitors were Mayor Frink, Mrs. Frink and Miss Frink, Archdeacon Raymond, Rev. Gordon Dickie and Mrs. Dickie and Inspector McLean. While the band played the children went on with their fun on the swings and slide and in the sand bin, and the older people had the opportunity to see the playground in action. A number of visitors bought souvenir baskets.

A basket made by Willie Mayne, ten years old, on this playground, will be exhibited, probably in a King street window, as an illustration of what is done in the line of artistic work by playground children.

Miss Melick, supervisor of the Aberdeen, has devoted herself unsparringly to the house and plunge it in warm water (as hot as you can bear your hand several times and then wrap in warm flannel and put in a warm place.

Daily Hints For the Cook

CINNAMON ROLLS.

Take a piece of biscuit dough, roll it rather thin, then grease the top with melted butter, sprinkle heavily with sugar and dust lightly with powdered cinnamon. Then roll the dough carefully, pressing it as it is rolled so that it will stick well together. With a biscuit cutter cut into rounds. Lay in a baking pan without touching each other and bake quickly to a deep brown.

PEACH SPONGE.

Soften 12 packages of gelatin in 12 cup of cold water, place over boiling water until dissolved, and add to 1 cup of peach pulp which has been pressed through a sieve and heavily sweetened. Place in a pan of cracked ice, stir until it begins to thicken, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of 6 eggs, flavor with a few drops of almond extract, turn into a mold and chill on ice. Serve with a garnish of whipped cream.

PICCALILLI.

Take half a peck of green tomatoes, slice and sprinkle in layers with about two-thirds of a cup of salt and let remain overnight. In the morning drain as free from water as possible or squeeze dry. Have ready half a peck of peeled and sliced onions. Put all in agate kettle and cover with good cider vinegar. Add half a pint of green pepper buds cut fine, five cents' worth of whole white mustard seed, one cup sugar and whole or ground cloves to suit taste, a very little cinnamon. Let boil until tender. Place in jars or large stone crock.

How She Obtained Good Bread

"I have been baking now for twelve years," writes one house-keeper, "and have never had good bread till I used White Swan Yeast Cakes." Sold at grocers in packages of six cakes for 25c. Write White Swan Spices & Cereals, Limited, Toronto, for sample.

TURNER HOWARD LEAVING.

Turner Howard writes to The Telegraph saying that he is to leave St. John after twenty-five years of work, pleasure, and happiness here, especially in the church and moral reform. He thanks all his friends who have extended kindness to him since he began his work here in 1886. He has distributed more than 30,000 pieces of reading matter, gratis. He also thanks C. H. Peters' Sons who have given him employment, and The Telegraph and Times for printing some of his communications. He is going to live in Fredericton, and will continue his reform work there.
