Papers received by the Tacoma contain full particulars of the disastrous fire at Canton. The fire, which was caused by the upsetting of a kerosene lamp in a house of ill-fame, started at 9:45 at night. It secured a good headway before any systematic effort was made to put it out, as the gates of the steets leading into the district were shut and it was some time before the local fire brigade could get to the scene. The inmates (most of them women of the unfortunate class) were in great danger as their street doors were locked. The crowd that soon gathered ultimately took the law into their own hands and broke open the doors in every direction. It that the keepers of these houses of ill-fame, of which the main street in this district is composed, locked and barred the doors to prevent robbers, with which the city swarms, under the pretext of going to the rescue, from looting the premises and kidnapping the hapless inmates. More Press Opinions Regarding the Resignation of Earl Rosebery.

Chief actor in the Sensation of the Hour Gives His Reasons for Doing as He Did.

Speech at Edinburgh Last Evening Was a Disappointment

London, Oct. 9.-The Star, touching upon the resignation of Lord Rosebery, remarks: "Lord Rosebery's fall was practically no more than the letter of dramatic and tragic. The hand which raised him up pulled him down. One result of Lord Rosebery's reign is, it may be said, that the Liberals will never again be led by a peer."

T. P. O'Connor in the Sun says: "The truth is Lord Rosebery never had a chance. He made many mistakes, and his language on the Irish question was especially subject to grave disapproval. But, all the same, he did not get a chance. The situation is grave. If Gladstone's return is impossible, if popular opinion will not form for Lord Rosebery's return, the choice must lie between Harcourt and Morley. My preference is for Morley, as he is more intimately associated with home rule." Among Dillonites there is general resentment at the fact of Lord Rosebery having resigned the leadership of the Liberal party without consulting them. The Independent says he did so without thought for home rule, and adds: "If Sir William Harcourt succeeds him, the condition of Irish affairs will be worse than ever. Hercourt can never be trusted by any Irishmen. The Empire theatre at Edinburgh was packed with 4,000 auditors to-night to hear the Earl of Rosebery, the retiring leader of the Liberal party. It was his agreement to speak at this meeting which precipitated His Lordship's action in resigning. In his letter to Mr Ellis, the first Liberal whip. Lord Rosebery said in explanation of his resignation: "When I speak, which I do this week, I must speak my mind without reference to party."

This announcement to speak his in-Among those present were Rt. Hon. Sir. Henry Fowler, formerly financial secretary of the treasury; Rt. Hon. James Bryce, who was president of the board in the Bessler of the December of the sebery m Arnold Morley, postmaster-general in the same ministry; the Earl of Crewe, formerly lord-lieutenant of Ireland; Baron Ribblesdale, and numerous mem bers of the house of commons and other leading lights of the Liberal party. Tremendous enthusiasm greeted Lord Rosebery upon his appearance before the audience, the whole assembly singing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Sir Thomas Gibson Carmichael, menber of parliament for the Midlothian of Edinburghshire (Mr. Gladstone's old constituency), presided. In opening the meeting he said that Lord Rosebery was their chosen leader and they were in no hurry to desert him. The Earl of Resebery was pale with suppressed feeling when he rose to made his address. He said in part that he had resigned because he could not sacrifice national interests to personal ambition. He welcomed the agitation in Great Britain on behalf of the Armenians because it would convince foreign governments of Great Britain's unselfishness and integrity and would strengthen the hands of the gov-

But the present agitation, Lord Rose bery pointed out, differed from Mr. Gladstone's Bulgarian agitation. Then Great Britain was supported by Russia. Now we have Russia and her armies against us. Russia's declarations on this point are absolutely conclusive. Moreover, then we had to force the hands of an unwilling government, while now the government is animated by the same wishes as ourselves. They possessed details, the speaker said, crimes in horror surpassing all he had ever read. The ferquity and cruelty displayed seemed to transcend the imagination of very fiends. By a device of powers they had first doubted these massacres, but the more recent Constantinople massacres made it impossible to

After referring to the unspeakable government of Turkey, Lord Rosebery pointed out that partial measures would not suffice. The whole Eastern question, he said, was raised with all the various remedies proposed, and said: "The deposition of the Sultan would be no remedy, as the system not the man, must be tackled. Moreover, this would be impossible without a concert of the powers and if the latter were attained it would be better to call upon it to deal with the larger issue involved. The proposal to withhold the Cyprus tribute is impracticable. It would be the Sultan's creditor's and not the Sultan who was being dealt with, and it would be like tickling the tortoise's back to have it laugh." Regarding the proposal to place the Dardanelles or Turkey in the hands of Russia, Lord Rosebery pointed out that neither of these was Great Britain's to dispose of and Russian methods, he said, were not so ideal as to warrant us in acquiescing. He also differed with Mr. Gladstone's proposal to cut off diplomatic relations with Turkey, but they differed, he added. as friends. A warm eulogy of Mr. Gladstone followed, but, the ex-premier continued, he even depreciated the proposal of such a thing as it would not only deprive Great Britain of all her influence with Turkey, but might drift us into war, and its failure would leave Great Britain in the same position, plus the public humiliation of confessing her impotence. Lord Rosebery also differed with Mr. Gladstone, he said, in his contention that Great Britain was bound in honor by the Cyprus convention to intervene. This convention, he urged, had been a dead letter ever since it was signed and neither the Sultan nor Great Britain had ever fulfilled their pledges, as they found it impracticable and futile to do so. He cited an instance in support of this argument the tripartite treaty between Austria, France and Great Britain of 1856, guaranteeing the integrity of Turkey, but this has never been carried out.

London, Oct. 10.—Lord Rosebery's speech at Edinburgh last night, giving bis reasons for resigning the Liberal leadership was eagerly awaited, but proved a disappointment. The morning papers say in effect that it was but a feeling exposition of commonplace views on the Eastern question and revealed resignation itself as to what led him to lay down the leadership of the party. The only actual news that his resignation has been in the hands of his colleagues since the general election. The chief interest in the ex-premier's utterance centered beforehand in the attitude he would assume on the Eastern question. It turns out after all that he differs in no essential way with Harcourt and Gladstone. He deprecates isolated action; so do they; he holds Armenia not worth a European war; so do they; he suggests making political advances to Russia, so, at least does Harcourt. Altogether, the speech neither justified his action in resigning, nor is it likely to affect the Turkish suituation in the slightest degree.

From a reliable source it is learned that Russia, England, and France practically have agreed to take concerted action in regard to the entire Eastern question, but the precise details have not yet been arranged.

Suggestion That Gladstone Should Accept a Peerage.

London, Oct. 8.-The resignation of Lord Rosebery continued to be the sensation of the afternoon newspapers to-Lord Rosebery's decision was a complete surprise to all, even to Sir William Harcourt, and a meeting of the Liberals will be convened in London before parliament meets. The St. James' Gazette, this afternoon, during the course of a long editorial on the subject suggests a way out of the difficulty by Mr. Gladstone accepting the leadership with a peerage, which the Queen has repeatedly offered him, pointing out that he will thus be spared the worry of the house of commons where Sir William Harcourt will assume the leadership The Westminster Gazette urges that there should be no undue haste in choosing Lord Rosebery's successor, adding that probably there will be no occasion to select a Liberal premier for years and asserting that, in the meantime, Sir William Harcourt is already leader in the House of Commons. Continuing, the Westminster Gazette says: "Whether Lord Rosebery is leader or not, it is highly probable that in the next few months he will find himself in a position of greater strength and influence than he
