Advantage of Buying Your Canned Goods Now and in Case lots. It is quite true that all around one sees fresh vegetables, but it is equally true that when you put away coal for use in the Winter the weather is warm—very warm. Buying canned goods now in dozen lets is just as reasonable as buying coal for the Winter in the Summer months.

Canned goods opened up low in price this season and now is a particularly good time to buy. Then again, if you buy in ease lots you will save considerable, to say nothing of having a good supply of canned goods on hand whenever they are required. We are quoting extremely attractive prices on case lots. Drop in and get our prices—it's really worth while.

Nova Scotia Underwear Preferred Stock Yields Over Seven Per Cent.

As is generally known, the Nova Scotia Underwear Company took over on the first of last year the business of the Nova Scotia Knitting Mills. The latter concern had successfully operated its mills at Eureka for the manufacture of the celebrated "Bureka" knitted underwear and kindred products.

Even bettering the excellent results of the first year's operation, the Nova Scotia Underwear Company reports for the first in months of its accord facel results of the first year's opera-tion, the Nova Scotia Underwear Company reports for the first six months of its second facal year (December 1st, 1912, to May Sist, 1913) large surplus net earn-ings over the amount necessary for Preferred Stock dividends. And orders on hand assure a con-tinuance of this progress for the balance of the year.

CHAPTER V I- (Continued.) You couldn't be like other women, ne declared, and there was more ten derness than hunger in his tone now as she looked up at him trustingly from the shelter of his arms, "I would spoil you to grow up." "It is so good to be alive and to love you like this!" she continued dreamily, aring into the fire. "I seem to have come out of a gloomy house into the clory of a warm spring day, for my eyes are blinded, and I can't see half the beautifuls I want to, there are so many about me."

Those are my arms," interjected the lier lightly in an effort to ward off said he. her growing seriousness. "I've never been afreid of anything and yet I feel so safe inside them isn't it queer?"

The young man became conscious of a vague discomfort and realised dimiy that for hours now he had been smothering with words and caresses a something that had strives with him to be leard, a something that instead of dying grew stronger the more utterly this innocent maid yielded to him. It was as if he had ridden impulse withrough spurs in a fierce desire to distance certain voices and in the first maid gallop had lost them, but now far back heard them calling again more strongly every moment. A men's houvague discomfort and realized dimiafford that now."
All arguments and pleading were in vain. He remained obdurate and instrongly every moment. A man's hon-or if old may travel feebly, but its pursuit is persistent. It was the talk about his people that had raised this sisted on her locating two other claims iness and indecision, he thought unestness and indecision, he thought. Why had he ever started it?

"The marvelous part of it all," continued the girl, "Is that it will never end. I know I shall love you siways. Do you suppose I am really different from other girls?"
"Everything is different tonight—the whole world," he declared impatiently. "Twe had a big handleagy" she said, "but you must help me to everceine it. I want to be like your staten."
He note and piled more wood upon branches a different and separate creek," he said, "The gold was carried down one of those smaller streams, and we won't take any chances on which one it was."

CHAPTER VII I want to be like your sisten."

He rose and piled more wood upon the fire. What possessed the girl? It was as if she knew each cunning joint of his armor, as if she had realized her peril and had set about the avalatings of his conscience deliberately and with a cautious wisdom beyond her years. Well, she had done it, and he swore to hitmest. Then he metted at the sight of, her, crouched there against the shadows, following his every movement with her soul in her eyes, the tenderest trace of a smile upon her lips. THE MAGIC OF BEN STARE. Lee say:

He was a strong man, and in his veins ran the blood of wayward forbears who were wont to possess that which they conquered in the lists of love, mingled with which was the blood of spirited southern women who had on occasion loved not wisely, according to Kentucky rumot, but only too well. Nevertheless they were honest mea-and women if coverentimental, and Nevertheless they were honest men and women, if eversentimental, and had transmitted to him a heritage of chivalry and a high sense of honor and courage. Her love had placed a barrier between them greater and more insurmountable than her blood. He gently withdraw his fingers from her grasp and, seeing the other side of the wicking, covered himself over without disturbing her and fell asleep. It was early dawn when Necia crept to him.

"I dreamed you had gone away," she said, shivering violently and drawing close. "Oh, it was a terrible awaken-"I was too tired to dream," he said.
"So I had to come and see if you were really here." He quickly rekindled the fire, and

They clung to the divide for several hours, then descended into the bed of a stream, which they followed until it joined a larger one a couple of miles below, and there, sheltered in a grove of whispering firs, they found Lee's cabin nestling in a narrow, forsed valgleefully. "We've beat them in! We've beat them in!"

They had been walking rapidly since dawn, and, although Burrell's watch showed 2 o'clock, she refused to halt for lunch, declaring that the others might arrive at any moment, so down they went to the lower end of "No Creek" Lee's location, where Burrell blazed a smooth spot on the downstream side of a tree and wrote thereon at Necia's dictation. When he had finished she signed her name, and he

"I'm not going to stake anything." "You must?" she cried quickly, the sparkle dying from her eyes. "You said you would, or I never would have brought you."

"I merely said I would come with you," he corrected. "I did not promise to take up a claim, for I don't think I ought to do so. If I were a civilian it would be different, but this is govern-ment land, and I am a part of the government, as it were. "A few hours ago."

"How did you come?" asked Lee.
"Black Bear creek," said the soldier curity, at which Runnion broke into "Better bush." Rurrell admonished him. "There's a lady inside." And at that instant Necla showed her laughing face under his arm, while the "Lunch is ready," she said. "We've been expecting you for quite awhile."

"Ba gar! Dat's funpy ting for sure," said Poleon, "Who to?" you bout dis strike, eh?"
"Mother, I made her," the girl an-they made a hasty breakfast. Before the warmth of the rising sun had penetrated the cold air they had climbed the ridge and obtained a wondrous view of broken country, the hills alight with the morning rays, the valleys misty and mystical.

leefully. "We've beat them in!"

They had been walking rapidly since awn, and, although Burrell's watch and Runnion looked black and had little to say. It was an uncomfortable meal. Every one was ill at ease. Gale in particular was quiet and ate less than any of them. His eyes sought Stark's face frequently, and once the blood left his cheeks and his eyes blased as he observed the gambles boldly eying Necia.

"You are a mighty good looking girl for a "blood," " remarked Stark at last, "Thank you," she replied simply, and the soldier's dislike of the man crystalthed into hate on the instant. There was a tone back of his words that seemed aimed at the trader, Meade thought, but Gale showed no sign of it, so the meal was finished in slience, after which the five belated prospectors went out to make their locations, for the fear of interruption was upon (To be Continues);
