CHAPTER IX.

"I have been reading over your letter f Thursday last, dear Steven," wrote Miss Travers, "and there is much that I feel I ought to answer. You and Kate are very much of a mind about the 'temptations' with which I am surrounded; but you are far more imaginative than she is, and far more courteous. There is so much about your letter that touches me deeply that I want to be frank and fair in my reply. I have been dancing all this evening, was out at dinner before that, and have made many calls this afternoon; but, tired as I am, my etter must be written, for to-morro that I am cold and utterly heartless that I can sit and write so calmly in reply to

"Ah, Steven, it is what may be said of me; but, if cold and heartless to you, 1 have certainly given no man at this garrison the faintest reason to think that he has inspired any greater interest in him.
They are all kind, all very attentive. have told you how well Mr. Royce dances and Mr. Merton rides and Mr. Foster reads and talks. They entertain me vastly, and I do like it. More than this,

Steven, I am pleased with their evident admiration—not alone pleased and proud that they should admire me who am pledged to you—not that alone, I frankly because I am vain.

"And yet, though my hours are constantly occupied, though they are here from morning till night, no one of them is more attentive than another. There are five or six who come daily. There are some who do not come at all. Am I a wretch, Steven? There are two or three that do not call who I wish would the that do not call who I wish would be disturbed, and wondered who it could be disturbed, and wondered who it could be disturbed, and wondered who it could be disturbed.

call. I would like to know them.
"Yet they know—they could not help it, with Kate here, and I never forget—that I am your promised wife. Steven, do you not sometimes forget the condi-tions of that promise? Even now, again and again, do I not repeat to you that you ought to release me and free yourself? Of course your impulse will be to say my heart is changing—that I have seen others whom I like better. No; I have seen no one I like as well. But is the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the seen no one I like as well as the And is it not all I have ever been able to promise you? I have lived so much alone, have had to think and do for myself so many years while Kate has been away, that perhaps I'm not 'like other girls;' but the respect I feel for you would be injured if I thought you strove to guide or govern me through others; and of one thing be sure, Steven, I must honor and respect and look up to the man I marry, love or no love. "Once you said it would kill you if you believed I could be false to you. If by that you meant that, having given my promise to you to be your wife at some future time, I must school myself to love you, and will be considered false if love do not come at my bidding or yours, I say to you solemnly, release me now. Then what could I you in any one thing? Once only has a night, Mr. Hayne and 1, and may not; but he is a man whose story excites my profound pity and sorrow, and he is one of the two or three I feel that I would like to see more of. Is this being false to you or to my promise? If so, Steven, you cannot say that I have not given you the whole truth.

"It is very late at night—1 o'clock—and Kate is not yet asleep, and the cap-tain is still down stairs, reading. He is not looking well at all, and Kate is sorely anxious about him. It was his evidence that brought years of ostracism and misery upon Lieut. Hayne, and there are vague indications that in his own regiment the officers are beginning to believe that possibly he was not the guilty man. The cavalry officers, *of course, say nothing to us on the subject, and I have never heard the full story. If he has been, as is suggested, the vice If he has been, as is suggested, the victim of a scoundrel, and Capt. I never saw so sad a face on mortal man as Mr. Hayne's. Steven Van Antwerp, I wish I were a man! I would trace that mystery to the bitter

"This is a strange letter to send to-t you; but Imm a strange girl. Already I am more than expecting you to write and release me unconditionally; and you ought to do it. I do not say I want it. "Faithfully, at least, yours, "NRLLIE.

"P. S.—Should you write to Kate, you are not to tell her, remember, of my meeting with Mr. Hayne. Of course am anxious to have your reply to that letter; but it will be five days yet." An odd letter, indeed, for a girl not yet twenty, and not of a hope inspiring character; but when it reached Mr. Van Antwerp he did not pale in reading it; his face was ghastly before he began. If anything, he seemed relieved by some passages, though rejoiced by none. Then he took from an inner pocket the lette that had reached him a few days previ ous, and all alone in his room, late a upon the table at which he was sitting then, with passionate abandonment buried his face in his arms and groaned aloud in anguish.

Two days after writing this letter Miss Travers was so unfortunate as to hear a conversation in the dining room which was not intended for her ears. She had was not intended for her ears. She had gone to her room immediately after breakfast, and glancing from her window saw that the officers were just going to headquarters for the daily matinee. For half or three-quarters of an hour, therefore, there could be no probable interruption, and she decided to write. ble interruption; and she decided to write an answer to the letter which came from Mr. Van Antwerp the previous afternoon. A bright fire was burning in the confess, but because it in itself is pleasant. It pleases me.

Very possibly it is and she perched her little, slippered feet upon the hearth, took her portfolio in her lap and began. Mrs. Rayner was in the nursery, absorbed with the baby and the nurse, when a servant came and an-

Miss Travers closed the door. It was the conduct of the woman who is, or is to be, his wife. Forgive me if I pain she strolled into the parlor just as she heard her sister's voice at the kitcher door:
"Come wright in here, Mrs. Clancy.

Now, quick, what is it?" And from the dining room came the answer, hurried, half whispered and mysterious:

"He's been drinkin' ever since he got out of hospital, ma'am, an' he's worse than ever about Loot'nant Hayne. It's mischief he'll be doin', ma'am; he's crazy like"-"Mrs. Clancy, you must watch him You- Hush!

And here she stopped short, for, in astonishment at what she had already heard, and in her instant effort to hear no more of what was so evidently not intended for her, Miss Travers hurried from the parlor, the swish of her skirts SCOTT'S EMULSION, telling loudly of her presence there.
