New York, March 29.—Liverpool market opened up to a full parity with our last night's closing, but quickly lost these gains after first prices here which were from 5 to 7 down on reports of rain over night in Texas. Selling on this news forced prices down to a level 10 to 15 points below last night's finals, but as the day progressed numerous private messages were received to the effect that the rains had been only showers or drizzles. On this the bulls took courage to bid prices back practically to last night's closing. The weather may indicates cloudy weather and showers in Texas for tonight. Good rains are reported in Kansas, which might work into the Texas belt. The immediate course of prices, especially with respect to the new months will depend upon whether this precipitation continues. The short interest in the market has been materially reduced and a vulnerable long account has been built up in the new months. We still think therefore that the new crops are a sale on every bulge.
