I wonder if every one in St. John realizes that if you see a suffering animal, there are two ways of alleviating its misery. If it is a horse, telephone to Mr. S. M. Wetmore, Secretary of the S. P. C., if a dog or against the sick or injured take it to the Animal Rescue League, on Elliot Row, or telephone to this League and the patient will be called for. In spite of many discouragements and trouble made by people ignorant of the menace to health that a sick animal is, this Society has accomplished a splend'd work during the past year. Beside the formal report sent to the annual meeting of the S. P. C., of 2dogs and cast destroyed and 25 cases of ill-treatment, there are various little incidents worth recording. One lady, noted for her fondness for animals, took a stray dog and kept it all inght. The pup got out of the room he had been put in, and ungratefully chewed large holes in some very hand some curtains. Don't imagine that little trifles like that are allowed to discourage people who take through the discourage people was and allowed to stay there, but was taken to one of the ladies' homes and cared for. A collie, lost and afflicted with mange, was taken to a home, washed, treated, cured and is now a prize animal, proving to be a fine dog. People going out of town can have their pets boarded and well cared for in their absence, and it is not too early to make a resolution to have your cat either boarded or humanely destroyed when you filt for the country. I may state that the name washed, treated, cured and is now a prize almand, proving to be a fine dog. People going out of town can have their pets boarded and well cared for in th

a-brac. The only trouble about this is that you must harden your heart, and decide what is really worth the trouble of packing and moving. Just as you have decided to throw it away, along comes Mary or John and says: "That's mine. I won it for a prize," or "You're not going to throw that away. I always liked that best of all my books." So it goes. One's treasures are some one else's trash. But in small homes and unsettled conditions of living, we have to learn to kee only the very choicest, and while som's things may be surrounded with associations, usually someone else has to surround them with excelsior, for the move.

suggestions for Weddings.

Although there may be many cases in which a war-bride, prompted perhaps by motives of economy, may decide to be married in a simple travelling costume, there is much to be said in favor of the traditional white satin, with its accompanying orange blossom wreath and long, floating veil of tulle, always supposing that the bridegroom may be home on the very shoriest leave, there is no reason at all why the bride should not look her best on what must be to her the day of days. Let her choose therefore something as simple in style as possible, but let it be entirely white, with no touch of color beyond the hint of green in the orange blossom foliage.

Soft satin makes an ideal wedding gown for a war-bride since it needs little or nothing in the way of adornment, so far as the skirt is concerned, while the bodice can be very simply arranged with a plantore effect in satin, filled in to the throat with a transparency of chiffon, and made with long chiffon sleeves. A knot of forange blossom might find place on one side of the waist, finished with two or three long trails of buds and foliage which should be allowed to fall a befully so that they serve to form a trimming for the skirt. At the throat there might be a small cluster of the same flowers, while a half-yearth to match should catch togethanthe folds of the white tulle veil.

A dainty afternoon trock, intended for a more youthful wearer, is carried out in the same flowers, while a half-yearth to match should catch togethanthe folds of the white tulle veil.
