Small Tea Cakes—Put a quarter of a pound of butter into a pound of flour, mix a quarter of a pound of sifted lump sugar, and wet it with water; when made up, divide it into two equal pieces; put one ounce of caraway seeds to one piece, by way of having two sorts; then rub the paste out very thin and cut it out with a small round cutter; butter a baking sheet, and dust it over with flour; lay them regularly on baking sheets, and bake them in a slow oven; they should be of a light brown. They should be kept in a dry place, either in a covered glass or pan. Small cakes of all description should be kept this way.
