ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A READER:—To make cement for glass or crockery soak two drachms of opt isinglass in two ounces of water for twenty-four hours, boil down to one ounce, add an ounce spirit of wine and strain through linen. Mix this while hot with the solution of a drachm of water in an ounce of rectified spirit and triturate thoroughly with half a drachm of powdered gum ammoniac. To make a strong liquid glue very useful for sticking wood, crockery and glass together, proceed as follows: Put three parts of glue in eight parts of cold water and let the mixture stand for several hours to soften the glue; then add one-fourth of a part of muriatic acid and three-fourths of a part of sulphate of zinc; keep the mixture at 185° fahrenheit for ten or twelve hours.

LILLIE S.:—Mousseline de soie is pronounced muce-lan-d'swa. Belt buckles are worn both at the front and the back, much depending on the style of the belt, as well as the garment with which it is to be worn.

LOURINE:—It is said that the hands may be quickly whitened and softened by the following process: Rub them well at night, for three nights in succession, with almond oil, and then cover them with as much fine chalk as they will take.

E. A. L.:—Seams of dress skirts are not feather-boned, but bound or overcast.
