

inspire a stronger sympathy with their sufferings, and admiration of their character ; and, above all, if the religious teachings of this story shall lead any to seek the same solace and succour which sustained our fathers in tribulation, and enbraved their souls for conflict with the evils of the time —it shall not have been written in vain.

