

Publicity Committee Sets Date For "D-Day" on Local Radio Station

Dalhousie Students In Conjunction With CJCH To Air Second Annual "D-Day" On Wednesday, March 7th

The Dalhousie Publicity Committee has announced that "Dalhousie-Day" will be held over radio station CJCH on March 7, one day before Munroe Day. "D-Day" was fostered by Art Mears, last year's Publicity Director, and because of its immediate popularity, the Day has become an annual affair. This year's Director, Jack Wilcox, has already started to map out the details of the all-day show.

The radio station has given permission to the students to run the studios for that day and have signified that they will do all they can to make the day a success. The entire day's programme will be in the hands of the students, with the exception of the commercials and the radio show "Penthouse Party."

Among the main attractions to be presented to the radio audience will be speeches by Dr. E. A. Kerr and Rev. Canon A. Stanley Walker, selections by the King's Choral Society and the Dal Glee Club, and a Students-Faculty Quiz. The majority of the programmes will, however, be in the customary fashion and positions for script men are open.

There is as yet many positions unfilled that are vital cogs in the running of "D-Day" on CJCH. A production manager and a traffic manager are needed to co-ordinate the facilities of the station and the students taking part in the day's activities. Other positions are also open and those interested can get in touch with Jack Wilcox or John Trim.

Hamilton Report

(8) Various Commission reports on Student Government, student income, university radio, free loan funds, International exchange of students, national tours have been completed or are in process of completion.

(9) Some work has been done on a proposed Quebec Seminar and strenuous efforts are being made to make it possible to hold this seminar in 1949. More publicity on this will follow.

(10) For those who like letters, NFCUS has made contacts with CCCYG, NCCU, CCRU, USNSA, ISS and is in cordial relations with all these groups. With IUS we are not in such a happy relationship.

From this it may be seen that NFCUS is more than just a name, that it has a part to play and is trying to play it. It will be an organ for the National expression of Student views as long as students make it so.

"What was the attitude of yourself and Mr. McKinney on returning from the Conference?"

"We hope that we can get some active interest in NIFCUS from some students, and we shall be making efforts to keep the Federation publicized on the campus. We need the co-operation of students on the campus so that NFCUS can be felt through our interest and part in it. In closing TUUM EST.

LAW NOTES

On Thursday of last week the Dalhousie Law Society held a very important meeting in the Munroe Room. The first item on the agenda was the reading of the financial report.

The Society decided to let the executive choose a committee to arrange a Law Party to be held sometime near the end of the month. They also decided to make necessary appropriations for the entertainment of the Osgood Hall Debaters who will appear here Jan. 28.

The Society also accepted a new set of procedure rules which would be posted on the bulletin board for examination. They will then be officially voted on at the next meeting.

The tryouts for the Law School Debating Team that will oppose Osgood Hall took place last Wednesday afternoon, and the Law Faculty John Ballem of New Glasgow, and Benjamin DeWolfe of Halifax to DO IT again.

PROFESSOR C. BENNET

Charles Lindsay Bennet M.A. (Cantab & Harvard) was born in New Zealand and spent his childhood in that country. At the outbreak of the First Great War he enlisted in the New Zealand Expeditionary Force, serving in France and Belgium between the years of 1915-1918, as a Warrant Officer Class 1.

Previous to his enlistment Professor Bennet had attended High School in New Zealand as well as Otago University, where he studied Arts and started a course in Law which was interrupted by the call to arms.

At the conclusion of hostilities Professor Bennet taught at a school for ex-servicemen, similar to the school in Pictou, N. S. for Canadian ex-servicemen.

After discharge Prof. Bennet returned to England on an overseas scholarship where he attended Jesus College, Cambridge; graduating in the year of 1922, upon completion Prof. Bennet came to Dalhousie as an assistant professor in English. After teaching at Dalhousie for one year Prof. Bennet went to King's until 1930, after this term of years he was made head of the English department at Dalhousie. In 1935 Prof. Bennet became registrar and he held this post until 1945 at which time he was selected for the post of Veterans Advisor, a post he still holds, and, due to his hard and endless work he has made the return to studies by Veterans an easier task.

Prof. Bennet is the author of six books used extensively by Upper Schools throughout Canada and Newfoundland.

During the last War Professor Bennet was Founding President of the Anzac Service Club which welcomed many of his fellow home-landers to the fair shores of Canada.

Prof. Bennet is married and has three children.

A Matter Of Technique

They were going to kill her—that was decided.

They looked like conspirators, these three men and were. They were standing outside the door, and one of them was holding up a small hatchet.

"This oughta do the trick," he said.

But the taller of the three—a gaunt, raw-boned man in overalls and leather jacket—raised his large hands and looking at them strangely, almost lovingly, whispered in a spine-chilling voice;

"There's no need of having blood all over the place—I'll do it, and quick, with these."

For a moment they looked at the big, calloused hands, and the long, steely fingers, and then he turned and walked from them. He opened the door of the room and stepped into the darkness—broken by a wide swath of brilliant moonlight which bathed one part of the interior in white light, and by contrast made the shadows darker.

It was quiet—and peaceful, too—this room in which there was to be a taking of life. Only the quiet breathing of the sleeper and the louder breathing of the tall man broke the silence. For a moment he stood just inside the door, and then stepped forward into the white light—his eyes staring fixedly at the sleeping figure, his hands, his ever-so-effective hands, hanging by his sides.

Almost casually, he stepped to the side of the sleeper, and stood a tall, angular statue—a statue of evil—by her side. Into his eyes there crept—only for a moment—a look of bewilderment, and of tenderness. Then the cold glint returned, and he stood watching the white breast slowly rise and fall, as his fingers flexed and slowly touched the slender neck.

She stirred in her sleep, and he began to press down with his thumbs, almost caressing her. Her eyes opened and she looked up—for a moment beseechingly, and then in terror as he applied a slow twisting, bending increase of strength.

The beautiful body stiffened, and thrashed madly, desperately, but it was too late, much too late. Not a sound was made—he was too cunning for that, too cunning to wake the other sleepers in the room. With a sudden, violent motion he forced her head back, and her neck snapped. A tremor ran through the already lifeless body, and the dainty head flopped to one side. Her eyes were open.

Breathing heavily, he released his grip and the long, cruel fingers slithered free. She was dead, quite dead.

He walked from the room, thru the door, and joined the other two men. One handed him a bottle, and he held it to his lips for what seemed to be minutes. Then he lowered it and spoke to the man with the hatchet;

"Alright, you can put away the hatchet—she's dead, and it was done quiet, too."

Turning to the other man, he said;

"Yes sir, there's only one way to kill a goose."

New "Unipress" Will Be Given Try-out In Canada

McGILL (CUP)—University newspapers in Canada and the United States will have European coverage under a news exchange system recently instituted. This organization, named "Unipress" was set up as a result of the International Student Service seminar held in Germany last summer at which it was found that many of the delegates were editors of student newspapers. A meeting was therefore called in the 300-year-old cast in Ploen, near Kiel in the British Zone. At this meeting "Unipress" was born.

The Dutch students, who are capable linguists, translate the material which is then sent to Montreal for distribution to Canadian and American colleges. Material from North American sources is sent to New York for translation and then transmitted

Many problems have yet to be solved. There is a wide difference in viewpoints in various countries on how material is to be prepared for publication and the language barrier presents another obstacle to "Unipress."

The 20 member papers of the CUP decided at the recent conference at Quebec to give new organization a year's trial and to assist it in every possible way during that period. The Canadian Committee of the ISS has granted the American bureau financial support to get the service started. If it is found that "Unipress" can provide "a valuable exchange of ideas and useful contacts with European students" the Managing Board will seek support from the National Federation of Canadian University Students.
