BANNER CAMP ROSSLAND

An Explanation as to the Option on the Le Ro1-The Percentage of Gold, Copper and Silver in the Ores of the Camp.

These deposits were such as he had never seen or read of in any other country, and his wonder was when he first saw G. W. Coon Hopelessly Crippled Wit them that they were not worked on a more extensive scale. In explaining why they were not worked more extensively than they have been he said that London, which is the money center of the world, had large interests in Africa and Australia and wished to unload these before embarking in a new field, and also because the value of the mines of British Columbia had not been impressed sufficiently upon the people of London. In 1896 Canada woke up from her lethargy and made some extensive investments in the Trail Creek district. Among those who purchased mining properties were Messrs. Gooderham and Blackstock. London soon after began to manifest an interest, but the capitalists there seemed to desire that the investments should be made through some of the leading statesmen or men of influence.
