

Russian Women Are Fighting With the Men

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The correspondent of The Morning Post in Petrograd sends the following: "Rumors persist that Przemysl, in Galicia, has been taken, but these reports are untrue. What really happened is that the Russians captured 4,000 of the garrison, with a large amount of arms and equipment, when the garrison attempted a sortie. Cholera and typhus are reported to be raging at Przemysl.

The number of women coming back wounded from the Russian front proves that the contingent of adventurous females on the fighting lines is considerable. These women as a general rule cut their hair, assume a soldier's uniform and get secretly with the conviction of firends among the soldiers. Others start alone on various pretexts, such as seeking injured relatives and then don male attire when they reach the front.

"A Cossack girl trooper, Helen Choba by name, went with the full knowledge and permission of the authorities, having long been distinguished as a horse-woman, swordswoman and marksman.

"Col. Tomilobskaya's daughter, who in male uniform on the Augustow front, distinguished herself as a scout leader, has been wounded three times."

keep none of them, except the very best ones, more than two or three days. There is a constant coming and going, but the short stay here makes a lot of difference.

The men who reach us are men who have been in the field for five weeks, and many of them came direct from the trenches where they have been fighting and sleeping in mud and dirt day and night and night and day.

They have not had a change of clothing since they left home, and for many days have not had a wash, but here they get a wash, and, if possible, a shave and a clean shirt and socks, and a sleep between sheets, and, as an Irishman said to me, "We can't sleep for comfort, sir."

They are all wonderfully patient, and with all the thousands I have spoken to and tried to help and cheer up a bit, I've not had a word of complaint from any one of them. I simply splendor. I have never admired Tommy as I do today. They are a crowd of heroes."

SIDELIGHTS ON WAR FROM ALL QUARTERS

Among the Russian officers on the Prussian frontier is M. Tretakoff, a well-known singer in the Petrograd Opera, and formerly an artillery officer. To encourage the men, he sang in the trenches military songs relating to Peter the Great, the soldiers joining in the chorus. He also sang songs from Tchaikowsky's operas.

During the recent fighting twelve Russian guns were attacked by a strong German force and were ordered to retreat. One battery was incapacitated owing to the horses being either killed or wounded.

M. Tretakoff shouted, "We can't leave any guns behind, boys!" and went to the aid of the battery with a few horses, he himself acting as driver.

There is a strange mixture of pathos and humor in the story told by a sergeant of the Seaford Highlanders.

low was gone to a land where there's neither giving nor taking of odds."

A curious story recently received from Villers Cotterets tells of a new attempt and novel one by the Germans to get the range in their artillery fire. A British sergeant one night ran into three Germans right outside the British line. Whipping out his revolver the Briton killed two of the Germans and the third surrendered. They had a telephone with them, connected with wire with their camp. The length of the wire paid out gave the range, of course, for the gunners.

At Swansea, M. Thoreau, a professor at Louvain University, who, it was reported, was shot by the German troops in view of his wife, is today alive and well, although he has passed through some harrowing experiences, according to a letter received here by a cousin.

Thoreau wrote that he had been singled out by the Germans because he had openly expressed sympathy with the French. He said that a child was born to his wife on the day the Germans entered the town and that he and his brother carried her and the baby into the cellar of the house on a mattress. They started to go back upstairs for some food but before they could do so, the Germans had entered the house.

Thoreau, his brother and his wife and the baby, remained in the cellar for six days. All they had to eat was some rice which they soaked in a cistern in the cellar. The Germans burned the house, but the cellar was not harmed. A water pipe burst, however, and covered the cellar floor with a foot of water. When rescued, Thoreau and his family were standing in this water, suffering greatly from the exposure.

Free Fight in Turkish Parliament—War Minister Wounded in the Leg.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Morning Post in an editorial to-day on Turkey says: "The struggle in Turkey between peace and war, between all that remains sound and the forces of anarchy, has been fierce and prolonged. We learn that in the course of the conflict scenes of actual violence took place in the government council chamber and that the Sultan's son shot Enver Pasha (Turkish war minister) in the leg with a revolver."

The editorial adds that the Young Turks can have no influence in the Moslem world as they are not Moslems but atheists.

The reference to shooting of Enver Pasha probably goes back to last September when a report originated between the crown prince of Turkey and Enver Pasha, the latter had lightly wounded the prince, who replied by shooting Enver Pasha in the leg.

EMPEROR AT YPRES

German Troops Made Splendid Effort, But Failed to Move the British Diehards.

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
LONDON, Nov. 3.—"One of the supreme battles of the war was waged on Sunday," says the correspondent of The Daily Mail in Northern France "when the Germans concentrated their forces in a mighty attempt to capture Ypres. Under cover of a furious cannonade they hurled vast masses of troops against the allies' line.

"The imperial order was to take Ypres at all costs and the German commanders were prodigal of life in their endeavors to fulfill this imperial command. The losses of both sides were enormous. The battle raged during the whole day, but Ypres is still unshaken.

"It is reported that the German Emperor himself was present to stimulate his troops."

CLEAR NORTH SEA; SEEK MINE-LAYERS

Its Entire Area Now Pre-empted for Serious Naval Operations.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Secretary of the Admiralty last night made an announcement of the virtual closing of the North Sea to traffic. In part he says: "During the last week the Germans have scattered mines indiscriminately in the open sea on the main trade routes from America to Liverpool, via the north of Ireland.

"Peaceful merchant ships have already been blown up, with loss of life, by this agency. The White Star Olympic escaped disaster by pure good luck, and but for warnings given by British cruisers other British and neutral merchant and passenger vessels would have been destroyed.

"These mines cannot have been laid by any German ship of war. They have been laid by some merchant vessel flying a neutral flag, which has come along the trade route as if for purposes of peaceful commerce, and while profiting to the full by the immunity enjoyed by neutral merchant ships, has wantonly and recklessly endangered the lives of all who travel on the sea.

"The Navy's Responsibility in these circumstances, having regard to the great interests entrusted to the British navy for the safety of peaceful commerce on the high seas and to the maintenance of the law of trade between neutral countries, the Admiralty feel it necessary to adopt exceptional measures, appropriate to the novel conditions under which this war is being waged.

"They therefore give notice that the whole of the North Sea must be considered a military area. Within this area merchant shipping of all kinds, traders of all countries, fishing craft and all other vessels will be exposed to the gravest dangers from mines, which it has been necessary to lay, and from warships searching vigilantly by night and by day for suspicious craft."

From November 5, the notice proceeds, all ships passing a line drawn from the northern point of the Hebrides, through the Faroe Islands to Iceland do so at their own peril. Steps will be taken, it is added, to warn all neutrals and all ships now at sea.

LANGFORD

The Olympic Arrives Safely At Belfast

[By Special Wire to The Courier]
LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2, 10.35 p.m.—The White Star Line Steamship Olympic from New York, October 21, as having passed Inishrahul bound for Belfast, from October 20 to November 2, the Olympic was at anchor in a remote part of Lough Swilly. With the exception of Charles H. Schwab, none of her passengers were allowed to land. Mr. Schwab alone was given permission to come ashore, and he reached London to-day from Lough Swilly. He refused to discuss the delay to the Olympic except to say that the steamer had not been injured. He left the vessel without his baggage and unaccompanied by his wife and two children, in England some time on business.

During the stay of the Olympic in Lough Swilly, none of the passengers on board with the exception of Mr. Schwab, was permitted even to have communication with the shore. It was at first reported that the passengers had been transferred by rail to Londonderry, but this turns out to have been erroneous. The Olympic was warned by wireless of the danger from German mines in the waters north of Ireland. Immediately on receipt of this communication she put into Lough Swilly.

Safe at Belfast
LONDON, Nov. 3.—The steamer Olympic anchored safely at Belfast this morning. Her passengers and mails were landed before noon.

A press censorship will be established to-morrow."

CROWN PRINCE HURT

GENEVA, Switzerland, via Paris, Nov. 3.—For several days rumors have been current here that Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany had been wounded in the fighting in France. These reports could not be verified, but travellers who arrived here Monday from Strassburg insist that they are true. They say that the prince is seriously, though not mortally wounded and has been taken to the palace at Strassburg for treatment. Several specialists from Berlin, they declare, have arrived at Strassburg to take care of him.
