Weeks, and this morning reported improving, Fred S. Chadwick died at five o'clock yesterday. He began to sink at noon and a complication of asthmatic and pneumonic tendencies hastened his end. The eldest of two sons of Samuel Chadwick, and aged fifty years, he had conducted successfully for the past eighteen years a growing jewelery, watch and clock business on Robinson street. He was recognized as a man of integrity in business, unassumingly a good citizen, fond of domestic ties and always devotedly attached to his mother, who died a few weeks ago. His father and one brother survive.

After battling bravely for three weeks, and this morning reported improving, Fred S. Chadwick died at five o'clock yesterday. He began to sink at noon and a complication of asthmatic is due not only to the wide minute is due not only to the wide morning in the publicity that has been given it, but to the extraordinary merit of the medicine itself. In all cities where it has been introduced, the most prominent and successful people, including Supreme Court judges, mayors of leading cities, lawyers, doctors, bankers, Government officially and well-known ministers of the Gospel; in fact, men and women in every walk in life have given the medicine their unqualified endorsement. As a matter of fact, line people out of ten who take the medicine tell their ways devotedly attached to his mothers.
