

now affrighted judge, "get up and light a candle." "Where are you?" queried Judge Carter. "Down here fell through a trap. Don't get out on my side of the bed." "All right." And Judge Markes, springing out on his own side, turned three somersaults and landed on the small of his back. Both were now convinced that they had fallen into a den of thieves, and were possibly to be murdered. The jokers had closed the heavy wooden shutters, so no light could enter, and groped around on hands and knees nearly frozen to death, and only at day break discovered the bed, climbed into it and got warm enough to talk the thing over.

THE CONDITION OF BUSINESS.

A writer in the Montreal Insurance Journal demonstrates to his own satisfaction at least, that times are not nearly as bad as they will be, and that the depth of the depression will not be reached until 1888. His argument is based upon the trade statistics available, which do not, however, extend over more than twenty years. It is evidently absurd to attempt to deduce any general law from such limited data, especially as in the period over which those statistics extend, there is only time for two "waves" as the writer calls them. Another reason why we think that his conclusions, which are illustrated by a diagram, are not worthy of much consideration is, that his diagram and statistics do not agree. For instance, his diagram shows us that trade has not yet reached the line of mean depression, but his statistics show that business is nearly as flat as it was in 1878. It is useless for a writer to think that his conclusions can be accepted when he argues from such extraordinary premises as that the times are yet better than the average.

As we do not believe that the MacKenzie Government was responsible for the depression of 1878, so we do not think it right to lay the responsibility for the present embarrassment of trade upon the shoulders of the Tories. The fluctuations of trade are beyond the control of the politicians. But the Tories are responsible for having aggravated the unsatisfactory condition of business, and this responsibility attaches in two ways. First, they induced men of capital to take their means out of safe and fairly profitable investments, and place them where they have failed to be remunerative; and secondly, by their extravagant policy they have made it necessary to maintain a tariff so high as to be burdensome. If the amount of money in circulation in Canada were larger than it is, the people would be able to pay the high duties without being greatly embarrassed, but when the amount levied in taxes falls, as it does in Canada, very little short of the total money circulation in the country, it follows, as a matter of course, that every department of business must be prejudicially affected. It is a serious matter to contemplate that nearly every dollar which every man earns or handles in Canada in the run of a year, that is every bank bill or piece of gold, silver or copper in circulation, or something equivalent to them, must sometime during the year find its way into the Dominion Treasury in the shape of taxes. This of itself is enough to make times hard. In the United States, high as their taxes are, there are five dollars in circulation to every one paid in taxes, therefore the country has thriven in spite of the high taxes. When our neighbors adopted protection they also issued a paper currency, and they flooded the land with something which, if not money, was more or less of an equivalent for it. Everybody had plenty of greenbacks; and it was demonstrated that it was not necessary for a dollar in paper to be worth a dollar in gold to make business buoyant. There was a vast amount of money, such as it was, in circulation, and there was something to do business with. We do not say that a paper currency is the necessary complement of a protective policy; but we do say that the two went together in the United States, and in attempting to compare the condition of things in the two countries and forecast the result of a high tariff here from its result there, it is well to bear this fact in mind.

The condition of business, as we gather from the commercial articles on our exchanges, is not altogether unpromising. The country is full of articles of value, which the owners would like to sell and others would like to buy. The difficulty seems to be that there is no money to do business with. True the government keeps borrowing money; but very little of that finds its way into circulation.

THE MAYORALTY.

As the close of the fiscal year draws near the attention of the ratepayers becomes directed to civic matters, and the question: Who shall fill the civic chair during the next term? naturally comes up for consideration. The selection of a fit and proper person to preside over the affairs of the city is always a matter of very considerable importance; and it is particularly so at the present time, when the civic debt is at its maximum figure and many important services stand in need of large expenditures. At such a time it is of the greatest importance that a prudent and experienced man should be selected to fill the office of Mayor. No very intimate knowledge of the public business of Fredericton is necessary to convince any one that a watchful eye should be kept over all expenditures, and a sound judgment exercised in deciding which of the various subjects, pressing for consideration, shall be dealt with and which deferred.

The ensuing year being also the Centennial of the founding of the city, the Mayor ought to be a gentleman of leisure and public spirit, as both of these invaluable traits in a public officer will be greatly in request some time next season. We submit for the consideration of the rate payers that there is no gentleman at present available as a candidate for the mayoralty who can better fulfil these conditions than the present incumbent of the office. A gentleman of liberal and progressive views, one of our largest taxpayers, of a decidedly practical turn of mind, willing to give his time and his ripe experience to the solution of the many perplexing problems arising in the city government, a public spirited citizen who takes great interest in historical matters, and who has already signified his willingness to aid in a suitable celebration of the city's centennial, Mr. Fenety is eminently qualified to fill the civic chair for another year; and in view of the devotion he has shown to the city's interests, and the obligation he has laid us all under by his efforts towards the beautifying of the city, it would be a graceful act for the ratepayers to unite in offering him a re-election by acclamation. We take it for granted that he would not decline to serve, as he has at all times evinced a readiness to discharge any duty which devolved upon him as a citizen.

In expressing these views we are satisfied that we voice the sentiments of a large majority of the ratepayers; and while we recognize that there are quite a number of gentlemen who would fill the office with credit to themselves and satisfaction to the public, we think that all things considered it would be judicious if Mr. Fenety is willing, to let him be his own successor for at least one term more.

THE BRIBERY CASE.

Facilis est descensus Averni. If you have any doubt of it, get a Tory paper and read its account of the delicious muddle into which Mr. Meredith and his Tory friends have got themselves over the Ontario Bribery Scandal. Don't take the word of a Liberal paper, because it might not present the case in the most favorable light for Mr. Meredith; but get into his own camp and listen how his defenders themselves describe and excuse what he has done. The Mail, for example, gets itself into a perfect agony and in an eight paragraph editorial, subdivided by dashes, which, as in that famous editorial in the Farmer, furnish all the points there are in the article, gives vent to its feelings. Mr. Meredith started out to prove that Mr. Mowat induced members to approach persons said to have been engaged in bribery to induce them to bribe them, and he was examined at length by Counsel. Mr. Mowat gave his testimony in which there was nothing whatever to justify the charge. The Mail thereupon asserts that Mr. Mowat's memory is "hazy" and his moral principles "molluscous." He says that it is "untruthful" or "an imbecile," "stupid" or "incompetent," "a trickster" or "an imbecile less criminal than his unscrupulous colleagues, but hardly less worthy of contempt." His colleagues are "dishonorable spies and double dealing," his conduct is "remarkable for dishonesty, partizanship and collusion and is disgraceful." Bunting, Meek and the rest of the bribers are innocent men; and one of them who acknowledged that he was sent to Toronto expressly for the purpose of bribing members to obtain certain concessions in reference to timber lands—a man who so far from denying his complicity in the transaction, acknowledged it, and tried to justify it by saying that he had done the same at home—the arrest of this man is styled the "plunder of a stranger." And so on for a column and a half. It may be that such sort of stuff will be swallowed as gospel by the Mail's readers, but we don't think New Brunswick Tories could be persuaded to take such a dose.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The man who manipulates the Cable news has pulled out another stop, and now the public is treated to a lot of stuff about France being ready to embrace England. This story is about as true as the other was.

Cleveland visited Buffalo on Thursday and received a magnificent reception. His fast journey from Albany was a continued ovation, and though the rain fell in torrents, eighteen thousand people marched in procession through the streets of Buffalo late into the night to signify their appreciation of their fellow townsman. Hundreds of bouquets, many from ladies, were sent to his hotel. After all this is the best answer his friends could make to the wretched Halpin story. A man without so many of his fellow citizens unite in honoring must be something else than a profligate and debauchee.

Sir John Macdonald left Ottawa for England yesterday, on public business. Is not this rather sudden? Not a word of this trip has been made public, and Sir John's friends had completed all their arrangements for an old-fashioned time on the fortieth anniversary of his entrance into public life. What can his mission be? It can't be cash; for that is Sir Leonard's business. It can't be cattle; for it is our own and only Sir Charles who soils his patent leathers around the stock yards. In these latter days, when the only business which Canada has in England is either to borrow money or get her cattle in alive, it is difficult to guess the reason of Sir John's sudden departure. Can it be that he has been sent for to discuss the question of reciprocity with the United States and the West Indies? All manner of stories are afloat, but none are reliable.

The St. Croix Courier has rather an amusing story the pith of which is that the local government expended $600 in St. Andrews for a questionable purpose, and that some person having found this out wrote to the Attorney General, and threatened to expose the matter if he did not get $100, and that the amount of blackmail demanded was promptly forthcoming. Any expenditure which the government has made in St. Andrews it will be prepared to justify at a proper time and place; but the idea that the Attorney General would pay $100 hush money to suppress something which must have the utmost publicity in a month or two, when the public accounts are published, is rather too ridiculous. But there is no truth in the report. The Attorney General says he never received a letter asking for $100 or any sum under the circumstances above stated; that he never paid $100 or any sum under the circumstances above stated or under any circumstances which by any possible construction could be considered as equivalent to them, and that so far as the allusion in the Courier relates to himself or to the payment of any sum as hush money, it is absolutely without foundation.

Cannibals Partially Converted.
 "My labors, so far, have only been partially successful," said a returned missionary. "Many of the poor heathen seemed disposed to accept the doctrines of Christianity, but are loath to give up the practice of cannibalism."
 "Rather difficult to reconcile the two," was a comment made.
 "Yes, they are somewhat antagonistic, but ultimately I hope to eradicate cannibalism entirely. Already I have been able to convert a large number to the extent of saying grace before meat."

Accepting a Daughter's Correction.
 From the San Francisco Chronicle.
 There's an old legen of the time when Bidwell was candidate for Governor. He had a servant at the door who demanded cards from his visitors before they could be admitted. Cards do not grow in the rural districts, and not the playing cards are not of the best quality. But the story has nothing to do with cards. One day an old farmer and his family called. The servant answered the call.
 "Is the Governor's folks at home?" demanded the old farmer.
 "Yes, papa, are, not in," said the Mills Seminary daughter.
 "Are the Governor in?" said the old man, and the young lady faint.
