"We are six in family. We live in a place where we are subject to violent Colds and Lung Troubles. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest and Lungs, and spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many different kinds of cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. That has been my experience. If you use it once, you will go back to it whenever you need it. It gives total relief and is a quick cure. My advice to everyone suffering with Lung Troubles is —Try it. You will soon be convinced. In all the families where your German Syrup is used we have no trouble with the Lungs at all. It is the medicine for this country. John Franklin Jones.

GENERAL NEWS

—The bill to prohibit combinations formed to advance the price of necessaries of life has passed the New York state assembly, and now goes to the governor.

—Buchanan, the young Halifax lawyer who is accused of having poisoned his rich wife has been found guilty at New York of murder in the first degree.

—Charles McNairn, living near Rockford, Ill, on Monday night put all his cattle and other stock into his barn and set it on fire. Then he locked himself in his house and blew his brains out with a shotgun. Thirty-eight head of cattle and six horses were burned.

—According to the latest statistics of hippophagy from Paris, 20 000 horses have been slaughtered for human consumption there within the past twelve months. Horseflesh is now serves upon many well-to-do citizens, whose unscrupulous wives purchase equine meat in lieu of beef or mutton, and by pocketing the surplus cash, as the difference in price is considerable, are enabled to satisfy their personal wants in a more luxurious manner than would be otherwise possible on a slender allowance.

—Cheap newspapers first became possible through the discovery by Alexander Priestly, who died last week, that white paper might be made from straw. Since that time the paper makers have conquered the forests and wood pulp has displaced straw; yet Priestly's discovery, in pointing out the pathway of research for new raw materials, was of supreme importance to the publishing world.

A Depressing Sight.

DECAY OF A BOOM TOWN AWAY ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

The most depressing sight I saw in a month of recent travel on the Pacific coast was a dead city. I will not give its name or locality, for I do not want to add to the troubles of its few remaining inhabitants. At the hight of its boom it had a population of 7,000; now it has a scant 2,000, and these are holding on only because they hoped that a railroad would do something for the place this year or next. The town is well built on the shores of a beautiful bay, but it has not a single wagon road leading back into the country. The forests hem it in on all the landward sides. It has not a single industry that I could discover to support the population, save one saw mill. The people are literally living on each other. In the big hotel I sat down to an excellent dinner served by a white-jacketed negro waiter, but there were only three guests beside myself. I walked about the lonesome streets and met nobody. I looked into the many stores and saw no customers. A daily paper appears regularly and trains and boats come and go, but there is no perceptible business transacted. The town was founded by a land company as a gigantic speculation and the company took in money enough from the sale of lots to accumulate a reserve fund from which the expenses of the hotel and newspaper are still paid. Perhaps the railroad company, which is invoked as a special providence, will yet do something to revive the place. In the meantime it offers a curious and striking study to the intelligent traveller who has watched the course of western town-site booms.

The Noted Lone Voyager Andrews Back From his Fourth Trip.

Capt. William A. Andrews, the world renowned long navigator, is again at home in Cambridge, looking hale and hearty after his latest perilous trip in a 14 foot folding canvas boat.

The captain's first deep sea sailing in small boats was done in 1878, when he crossed the ocean from South Boston, going to the Paris exposition in the 15-foot dory Nautilus, accompanied by his brother Walter. This was the first successful voyage in a boat of this size. In 1888 he made an attempt to cross in the Dark Secret, but had to abandon the trip after getting half way over. The captain had a theatrical contract which began in New York on Sept. 3, and he arrived there nine days later.

His next venture was in the Mermaid, when he challenged Capt. Josiah W. Lawlor to race him to Lands End, Eng. The Mermaid was inferior to the Sea Serpent, in which Capt. Lawlor sailed, and Andrews was beaten. He abandoned the trip at the solicitation of the captain of the steamship Ribruz. On this trip Capt. Andrew's boat was capsized seven times, and on one occasions he clung to her for half an hour during a fearful gale.

On his final voyage he beat the record made by Capt. Lawlor by 12 days, crossing in the remarkable short time of 30 days. The Sapolio, in which he made his voyage, is a canvas-covered folding boat, decked over, excepting a cockpit two by three feet fitted with a sliding hatch. She is about 14 feet 6 inches over all, and carries 350 pounds of lead on her keel. She is built, somewhat after the style of the 25-footer Dilemma. Capt. Andrews and his boat will be at the World's Fair.

Capt. Andrews was asked how he liked his boat. He replied: 'A hundred miles a day for the first 30 days from Boston; that means 3000 miles, and is a fact that speaks eloquently for the sea worthiness as well as for her speed. No such feat was ever before accomplished.'

In reply to the question, How were you received at Huelva? He said:

Like a second Columbus; I cannot find words to express the way in which I was welcomed and feted. And he proceeded to relate how he was carried shoulder high first to the town house and then to the Columbus Congress—the Congresso Americano—which was in session. He was at once made a member, and the subsequent proceedings in Spain did not cost him anything, for the government took possession of him, banqueted him and lodged him in princely fashion.

During the voyage he slept from time to time jammed up in a corner of the cockpit, letting the boat steer herself, which she did very well when he had trimmed the sails for that purpose. In heavy weather, however, sleep was almost impossible.

His sea anchor—that is a sort of canvas bouy—he lost the first time he used it, and afterwards, when riding out a storm, keeping the jib set, he simply threw his ordinary iron anchor, overboard and held her up stem to the sea.

You carried lights, of course?

Not exactly; I had a small lantern—the smallest boy's lantern I could get, but I only waved it when I saw a vessel approaching and if was sleeping I took the risk. Besides, what was the good of a lantern? If I burned it, a dash of spray against the glass shivered the glass to pieces, and I could not carry a cargo of lamp glasses.

You needed other things besides lamp glasses. What did you do for food?

I had canned meats, salmon, rabit, beef. For bread I had little biscuits about the size of a shilling, oyster crackers we call them in America.

In answer to further questions, the captain explained that he carried no fire, and that, though he never read a line during the voyage, he never had a dull moment. All his time was employed in looking after his little craft and making notes of everything that happened.

WOMEN'S COLUMN.

W. C. T. U. Literature.

A valuable contribution has lately been made to Canadian Temperance Literature in the autobiography of Mrs. Letitia Youmans, the pioneer of the white ribbon movement in Canada. The book is published at the request of the W. C. T. U. of Canada, and contains about 200 pages. It gives the history of the W. C. T. U. from the commencement, and is full of interesting illustrations, and thrilling incidents.

For a number of years no temperance worker was better known throughout the Dominion than Mrs. Youmans. She spoke repeatedly from Prince Edward Island to Vancouver. For four years and a half she has been a helpless invalid, not able to leave her room, and for the most of the time confined to her bed. The dictation of the book has, however, somewhat relieved the monotony of the sick room, and the author trusts, that it may be the means of stimulating others to engage in the good work for "God and Home and Native Land.

The book gives many glimpses into the early days of Canada, touching on life in the Backwoods, and giving a glimpse into a pioneer's home. It describes also the opening of academies in Cobourg and other places, following upon the primitive custom of the country school master being "boarded round." Then these are the dawning of temperance movements, the organization of the W. C. T. U. in Canada, and most interesting accounts of various trips through the Provinces, United States, England, Ireland and Scotland, in the interests of the W. C. T. U. It is hoped that all members of Unions and those in sympathy with the temperance movement will do themselves the pleasure and profit of reading this story of the leader of Canadian W. C. T. U. workers.

The price of the book is $1.00, and the Corresponding Secretary of any Union will act as an agent, but if any one perfers, the book will be sent post paid to any one enclosing one dollar, and addressing,

Most Disastrous of All.

LIQUOR CHIEFLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE EXODUS.

THE GOVERNMENT'S DUTY.

Under the heading "Emigration and Intemperance," the Monde publishes a very interesting article furnished by a correspondent. The writer holds that the Government having expended a large amount of money to have a report on the causes of emigration, and that report showing intemperance to be the most disastrous cause of the great exodus from this province, it now becomes the evident duty of our rulers to reduce the number of taverns and to abolish the entirely where they are not needed. He then goes on to show how false is the prevailing idea that strong are a necessity for travellers, and he instances the example of Father Lacombe and all the other North-West misilonaries, who for years and years travelled through the prairies, at all seasons, sleeping on the hard ground, or in the snow, and yet never carried a drop of liquor with them. Bishop Tache, who never used strong drinks, was obliged to sleep on the snow during as many as forty consecutive nights. After stating that nearly all the victims of accidents in the northern regions during winter indulged in strong drinks, and that most misfortunes and crimes have liquor as their primary cause, the article adds: —"It is through the immoderade use of strong drinks that our country is ruined, that the country districts are deserted, and that emigration is on a daily increase. At the foot of the Laurentides, not far from Montreal is a parish, which numbered 230 families, twelve years ago. At present there are hardly 130. In that parish which is far from being a commercial centre, there is a tavern. The tavern keeper pays his license, keeps up his family and puts $300 to interest every year out of the profit of his business. Meanwhile, families are in misery, live in privation, and finally emigrate to the United States. Who would dare say that a tavern in that parish is not a real calamity, an enormous crime? The newspapers, a short time ago, referred to a parish on the shores of the St. Lawrence river where there are 40 farms to be sold at sheriff's sale. That paris is endowed with two hotels. This is progress in no way enviable. If the Government really takes an interest in this serious question, it must hasten to reduce the number of taverns and to abolish them in localities where they are not evidently useful."

—A joint stock company has been formed in Quebec to carry on the industry of canning sardines, and is the first attempt of the kind in America. Some specimens of the fished canned last summer have been submitted to experts and pronounced a decided success, and this year the business is to be extensively prosecuted. The company that has been formed for the purpose—L'Union Sardiniere du St. Laureat—has a capital of $100'000, and expects during the coming summer to put up fully a million tins of the little fish. The tin boxes for holding the sardines are in course of manufacture in Quebec, where the factory established for the purpose is turning then out at the rate of 10.000 a day. —Trade Review.

Chatham World: Mr. F. W. Sumner of Moncton and the Government agent differ in opinion in regard to a quantity of sleepers which Mr. Sumner has cut in Northumberland and Gloucester. Mr. Sumner refuses to pay the stumpage. He claims that he has only half the number he is asked to pay for, and offers his note for half the government claim The reply is that the sleepers have been counted by the Government agent, and the claim based on the result. Mr. Sumner repeats his denial and refusal and began to remove the sleepers, Now or never is the time for action, and the whole lot, or enough of them to pay the $970 stumpage, have been seized or are to be seized at once.

But when she was two years old, sores broke out behind her ears and spread rapidly over her head and forehead down to her eyes, and into her neck. We consulted one of the best physicians in Brooklyn, but nothing did her any good. The doctors said it was caused by a scrofula humor in the blood. Her head became offensive to the smell and dreadful to look at. Her general health waned and she would lay in a large chair all day without any life or energy. The sores caused great itching and burning, so that at times we had to restrain her hands to prevent scratching. For 3 years with this terrible humor. Being urged to try Hood's Sarsaparilla we did so. We soon noticed that she had more life and appetite. The medicine seemed to drive out more of the humor for a short time, but it soon began to subside, the itching and burning ceased, and in a few months her head became entirely clear of the sore. She is now perfectly well, has no evidence of the humor, and her skin is clear and healthy. She seems like an entirely different child, in health and general appearance, from what she was before taking
