BONE-DRY MOTION IN LOCAL HOUSE

It was said on Saturday that early this week, Hon. J. F. Tweeddale will move the bone-dry resolution in the Legislature. Mr. Peck, of Albert will second it, and the member of the government to move and a member of the opposition to second the resolution.
There is already much speculation as to what fate the resolution will meet. The present outlook is that there will be no alignment of parties, but that the individual members will act independently on the question.
There is, however, a growing feeling amongst the members that the referendum on the general question of provincial prohibition, the law having been adopted as a war time measure in this province, should first be held and after that referendum takes place the federal government could be asked to act and bring on the plebiscite on the question of importation for personal use, as at present allowed. Such a viewpoint, it was said today, would be taken by some of the most influential men in the House and was sure to have a large measure of support.
