A Spirited Reply.

A Spirited Reply.

To a Conservative, who repeated the request of Mr. Carling's newspaper exponent to-day—that the theft of Mr. Hyman's seat should be condoned in the interest of peace, a leading Liberal medical man to-day replied:

"He who steals our purse steals trash. But he who steals our liberties steals that for which our fathers bled—steals that which is not ours, but is the heritage of ages, and rather than give up one jot or tittle of these liberties, we would drain our hearts of their last drop of blood." hearts of their last drop of blood.

"David Garrick."
'David Garrick' was the production at the Grand last night by Camille Townsend For medicinal uses are unexcelled just now for the grip. We have some fine old Whiskeys and Brandies—the only David Garrick, with no small credit to David Garrick, with no small credit to herself. The audience was fair in size and evidently appreciative. A laughable farce entitled "A Ghost in Spite of Himself" was presented as a finale. To-night the popular "Lady Audley's Secret" and an after-piece will be on the boards. The prices are low and the performances well worthy of full houses.

Lolling in Church Pews.

The Bishop of Huron, in a recent sermon in Grace Circh, Brantford, said that if there was one thing which the church had forgotten more than any other it was the power of prayer. It was a painful thing to look over a congregation while prayers were being offered and to see the light part taken in the homage by many of those look over a congrecation while prayers were being offered and to see the light part taken in the homage by many of those present. Many never condescended to bend the knee, but lounged back in sumptuous indifference, while at the close there came but a feeble and meaningless "Amen." It was not wealth nor any other temperal power which the church needed so much as the deep spiritual power of prayer. There were three positions in prayer. Standing, which was scriptural and implied service; kneeling, which betokened consciousness of sin; and another which was so popular among the elegant people of modern society. It was that of sitting and it implied equality. If in the presence of the Queen, they would know that they had no right to sit, and would never attempt it, and yet they did so in the presence of God. They apparently felt themselves the equal of him. Although God's awful majesty was there, they assumed the right to sit. Strong abled bodied men lolled back in their scats, and the occupants of pews cried out that they were miserable sinners, while the express in their richly furnished pows had never been touched by the bent knee.

TURKEY AND THE TURKS.

Mesrob Baghdasarian Addresses Large Audience on His Native People and Their Habits.

People and Their Habits.

The basement of the First Congregational Church was crowded last evening, when Mesrob Baghdasarian, a Turkish missionary, delivered an interesting and at times hu orous address on "Turkey and the Turkish People." He was clad in his native costume, in the garb the wealthy populace usually wear. Rev. Robert Aylward, paster of the church, introduced the speaker.

populace usually wear. Rev. Robert Aylward, paster of the church, introduced the speaker.

Mesrob Baghdasarian said he was not going to speak about the turkey that the children were so fond of for dinner, but of a large country. The Turks' time of prayer was at 7 o'clock, according to Turkish time, or 1 o'clock by European time. The speaker illustrated the way in which the Turk prayed, which would seem rather odd to Canadians. Sometimes 10,000 Turks were heard at one time yelling in their own language, "May the Sultan of Turkey live forever." Constantinople, he said, was called "the city of dogs," New York "the city of saloons," and Brooklyn "the city of churches." Turkey in Asia Minor was a very beautiful country. It abounded in fruits. We can truly say the Garden of Eden was in Armenia. Twenty cents will buy a load of watermelons, which consists of twenty melons. A workingman gets about 10 cents s day. Some get only 8 cents. A man with $2,000 could go out there and live in grandeur with fine carriages and plenty of servants."

Mr. Baghdasarian sang a love song in the Turkish language. A young man when singing a love song held his finger in his right car. The young ladies sang such songs as if they were crying. The Armenians were very intemperate, but the Turks twee more temperate. "If I were in Turkey I could not look on the face of a woman unless I did it secretly," the speaker continued. "Thank God when I am here I can look at all the young ladies. A prophet has said that women are the servants of the devil. The ladies of Constantinople have their own time for sport and enjoyment. Sometimes they have their chance to display their love for a young man. A when she sees a young man come along she admires she can drop her veil and when she sees a young man come along she admires she can drop her veil and when she sees a young man come along she admires she can drop her veil and when she sees a young man come along the seem and the she can be not him to the control to the devil.

to display their love for a young man. A Turkish woman can sit in the window and when she sees a young man come along she admires she can drop her veil and throw a bouquet of flowers at him and say 'You are as sweet as sugar.' The ladies of Constantinople are the handsomest women in the world excepting Canadian young ladies." The conduct of a woman weeping over the corpse of her dead husband was shown. She uttered such exclamations as: "O, my darling," "O, he was a handsome man," "He had sparkling eyes," etc.

When a boy arrived at the age of 12 years it was the duty of his father to take him to school. The teacher was allowed to beat his pupils as much as he pleased. The pupils were expected to study as loudly as they could in school. The boys kneeled on the floor, held their books in their hands and studied in a lond voice. They needed no gymnasium. They received enough physical exercise while they were at their books. If a single mistake were made by a pupil when reciting his lessons he was subjected to a severe thrashing. If the teacher came to the school and found the pupils orderly he would shower praises upon them, but if they were misbehaving they would all be the school and found the pupils orderly he would shower praises upon them, but if they were misbehaving they would all be punished. There were very few schools for women. The Turks believed that if women could write they would be always writing love letters. When a young man was engaged to a young woman she made him a purse which he hung on his belt and in which he kept his tobacco. In return the young man wore his hat forward on his head. Men always carried daggers when traveling to protect themselves against traveling to protect themselves agains robbers.

Mr. Baghdasarian concluded his lecture by singing one of the national songs of

The rod in this hydrant is actuated by a brass screw and handle above, and raising plunger the smallest fraction of an inch, closes waste before any water can enter discharge pipe. With the valve open we have the full and unobstructed flow of water through the hydrant which can well be compared to a straight way valve or roundway cock.
