True Bills Against Powless for Perjur and Miller for Misdemeanor.

THURSDAY.

Immediately after the true bill for murder had been brought in against Wm. Wilson and John Fitzpatrick to-day they were arraigned and pleaded not guilty. They said they were ready for their trial and will be brought up to-morrow morning.

In the case of Stickles vs. Township of Dorchester, the judge allowed the plaintiff $50 paid into court by the defendants, and ordered him to pay the costs of the trial. Bowen vs. Scarrow was called next. An old man named Henry John Bowen, who during the winter manufactured washing machines in a small shop at the rear of Detective Allen's effice on Dundas street, sued William Scarrow, harness-maker, to resued William Scarrow, harness-maker, to recover $1,500 damage alleged to have been done him while in his employ. The planntiff was working on a building being erected by the defendant in London West last August and owing to an alleged defective scatiold he was precipitated to the ground, a distance of six or eight feet. He was employed as overseer, but was ordered to go on the scaffold to do some of the work. The boards, he says, were unfit for a scaffold, and as a result of the fall he was laid up for a week, and had med William Scarrow, harness-maker, to reunfit for a scaffold, and as a result of the fall he was laid up for a week, and had hardly been able to do a day's work since the accident. His right side, he claimed, was partially paralyzed and his leg was like a wooden one. He did not think he was getting any better. His leg would give out after he had walked a short distance, and he could not do justice to what he would call a day's work. For treatment he took eight or ten hot sulphur he would call a day's work. For treatment he took eight or ten hot sulphur baths and applied liniments. When crossexamined by E. Meredith, Q.C., the plaintiff said he had asked Mr. Scarrow to allow him to put up the scaffold, but his request was not granted. He did not say anything about the boards used. For three months after the accident the plaintiff worked for defendant, and then left his employ. At that time he told him that he was going to sue him.

Dr. Wilson had examined the plaintift and said he was progressing rapidly and might become entirely well again.

The prosecution argued that the boards used in the scaffold were not fit for use, and that therefore the defendant was guilty of negligence.

Mr. Justice Street ruled that there was no evidence to prove negligence on the part.

of the defendant, withdrew the case from the jury and dismissed it with costs. Court then adjourned. FRIDAY.

There was a big crowd in the court room this morning, as Detectives Graham and Templar led in John Fitzpatrick and Wm. Wilson, the two men charged with the murder of an old man named Edward Upton, in the bar-room of the Western Hotel at Strathroy, on Oct. 17 last. The prisoners seemed more fully to realize their position than when they were arraigned yesterday afternoon, and their countenances presented a more solemn countenances presented a more soleman aspect. This was especially notice aspect. This was especially notice able in the case of Fitzpatrick, the able in the case of Fitzpatrics, one younger prisoner of the two. Yesterday when being transferred to the jail he remarked "We'll soon get used to this place." This morning he was disinclined

There was some difficulty in obtaining a jury for the case, Mr. Meredith challenged twenty for Wilson and a number for Fitzpatrick. The following gentlemen composed the jury: George Lowthian, Caradoc; James Stothers, George Lowthian, Caradoc; James Stotiers, North Dorchester; Peter Portsmouth, Caradoc; Archibald Campbell, Adelaide; Thomas Riggs, West Williams; Walter Nagle, Caradoc; Alex. Crawford, Parkhill; Thos. C. Hodgens, city; Thos. Edwards, city; Joseph Hook, city; Archibald Camp-bell, Lobo, and John P. Mohillan, Glencoe. Mr. Lount, Q.C., of Toronto, and J. B.

He saw the two prisoners, the father of Fitzpatrick and deceased in that room. Upton was on a bench with his arms on his knees and his head down. The three men were standing in front of him. His coat was off, his shirt unbuttoned, his breast bare, and he was breathing heavily. Witness asked what was the matter with Upton, and Peter Fitzpatrick said, "The old man will be all right in a little while when he gets straightened up." Nothing at all was said about Upton being hurt. Witness herd somebody say, "I guess he's got the heaves."

DR. GZO. BILLINGTON has been a practicing physician for 50 years. He was called in a few minutes before 5 o'clock to see deceased in a room adjoining the barroom. His body was partially supperted by Peter Fitzpatrick, and his head was hanging down. On examination witness found a fracture about 34 inches long on the right side of the skull. Witness thought the injury could be caused by a blow from an instrument similar to it. Witness could observe no signs of liquor on Upton. He thought there was no attempt to conceal the injuries to the man.

Deceased was sober at that time, although he did sometimes get under the influence of liquor. It was between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening when witness first heard that his grandfather had been injured. He went at once to Fitzpatrick's hotel. On inquiring of John Fitzpatrick regarding the injuries, he replied that Upton was standing in front of the bar and fell over on a spittoon. He said there were seven or eight men in the bar at the time, but he could not give their names. Witness remained until 4 o'clock in the morning, and deceased died about an hour later. He saw a wound towards the back of the head, but could not tell what it was.

MONTREAL, May 5.—There is no doubt that the French-Canadian exodus to the United States is seriously alarming the priests, who are using every means in their power to stop the drain. Abbe Dugas, the well-known colonization writer, publishes another appeal on behalf of French-Canadian emigration to the Canadian Northwest. "It is useless," he says, "to deceive ourselves. We may boast as much as we wish of the presperity in Canada, the truth ourselves. We may boast as much as we wish of the prosperity in Canada, the truth is that the tide of emigration towards the United States has never been so great as at the present moment." He goes on to remark that in their past struggles the French-Canadian people were helped and supported by the clergy, and he promises the same support again for any public man who will undertake the mission of Such a combined action would insure subess, and whatever public man took up the scheme would deserve the gratitude of he whole Canadian people. The abbe co cludes his article with the remark that I propeans must find it very strange if our lorthwest is really what it is claimed to be that Canadians flock to the United States, and that while agents are sent abroad to secure immigrants, nothing is done to keep a good class of settlers at home. This is certainly of a nature to raise doubtain the minds of foreigners as to the truth of all that is said concerning our Northwest.
