Last evening a new local directory of the Industrial Brotherhood of Canada was organized in the United Labor Hall, by the general secretary-treasurer, Joseph T. Marks. The new body will be known as the Tinners' and Sheet Metal Workers' Directory, and will be composed exclusively of members of the craft. The charter application was a large one, and the new directory starts out with good prospects and a full treasury. This order is no advocate of strikes and believes in accomplishing its objects through the education of the masses. Drawing and pattern cutting and objects of interest to the timsmith trade will occupy the attention of the members, who in the meantime will not remain idle in regard to discussing the great social questions and aiding on the work of reform as laid down in the preamble and platform of the brotherhood. The meetings will be held each alternate Wednesday evening in Labor Hall. Crganize.

HASTINGS, Ont., Sept. 1.—A sad accident occurred Tuesday night about 8 o'clock during a very heavy thunder storm. Mr. John Kearney, a well-to-do farmer, whose farm is a couple of miles south of this town, "I will wed when you bring me the Emperor's star." were kneeling at their evening prayers when the crash came. The electric fluid came in through an open window upstairs, passed down through the floor, and struck passed down through the floor, and struck Mr. Kearney, who was kneeling below. The shock extinguished the light, and by the next flash Mrs. Kearney saw her husband lying dead across the chair at which he was kneeling. The lightning did not leave the slightest mark on its victim, and, with the exception of a slight crack in the floor, there is no trace of the dread visitor.

W. Kenrey leaves a wife and three chill. Mr. Kearney leaves a wife and three children to mourn his untimely end.

PERPETUAL MOTION IMPOSSIBLE. Insurmountable Obstacles in the Way

Insurmountable Obstacles in the Way of Making an Ideal Machine.

The reply to the question, Is perpetual motion possible? depends entirely upon the limitation put upon the term "perpetual motion." If we understand these words to mean a machine that would start itself, furnish power for doing work and continue in operation so long as required or until worn out, without the assistance of any external agency, the Scientific American thinks we can say with the utmost confidence perpetual motion is impossible. If on the other hand, we define perpetual motion as a machine dependent for its action upon the variability of one or more of the forces of nature, we may say perpetual motion is possible. The thermal motor, in which expansion and contraction are produced by natural changes of temperature is an example of a machine of this kind. In this machine the changes in volume in a body are made to store energy to be used in continuous regular work. A perpetual clock has been made on this principle.

Sun motors of various forms have been devised, which might be used in connection

Sun motors of various forms have been devised, which might be used in connection with storage mechanism for furnishing power continuously. A sun motor of sufficient size with a suitable storage system could furnish power the year round in almost any part of the world; success being a question of hours of sunshine and capacities of motor and storage system. Of course, what is said with regard to the sun motor applies with cqual force to water wheels, wind mills, tice and wave motors. Without doubt all of these prime movers will come more and more into use as time advances and storage systems are perfected. Still they do not satisfy the seeker for the ideal perpetual motion. This should fill the conditions first mentioned; but, as we have already said, this is an impossibility. The first and strongest reason for making this positive assertion in regard to the ideal perpetual motion is found in the fact that never in the history of man has he been able to make a single atom of unit of energy.

All the works of man, of whatever name Sun motors of various forms have been matter or create the smallest fraction of a unit of energy.

All the works of man, of whatever name or nature, have been constructed of materials already in existence, and all the work done by man and his enginery has been accomplished by using current natural forces, such as the gravitation of water, the power of the wind and the heat energy of the sun, or the stored energy of coal and other fuels or chemicals. Having the command of some of nature's forces, inventors have sought to circumvent nature's laws so as to make water "run up hill," to cause masses of matter to act alternately in accordance with and in opposition to the law of gravitation; in short to deprive matter of gravity while ascending, and to cause it to act with the full force of gravity while descending.—[Chicago Hearld.
