COURT CONCLUDES

Last of the Cases for the Winter
Assizes Disposed Of.

The winter assize court has concluded its business. Three cases were disposed of before Mr. J. B. Armstrong yesterday afternoon, and the court adjourned at 7 o'clock in the evening. In the case of Knott vs. Lewis, Mary Knott, of this city, sued Francis B. Lewis, manufacturer, for $702.71, due on a promissory note. The plaintiff was awarded a verdict of $716.75. The non-jury case concerning an estate, brought by Mrs. A. M. Young, of Oakville, vs. C. T. Campbell, of London, was postponed until the next court. George Miller sued the Toronto Globe for alleged breach of contract, in connection with advertising business. The case was argued before Mr. Justice Britton, who reserved judgment. That concluded the list of cases before the assize.

LOWER FARES IN SIGHT

May Go Into Effect On Pottersburg and Broughs Bridge Lines

As an Agreement Between Company and Township Arranged.

Yesterday afternoon the London Township Board met in First Vice-President T. H. Smith's office and discussed the matter of the Pottersburg and Broughs bridge lines, which are to be reduced within its walls last evening. Numerous veterans who had served in former strenuous campaigns were there; the majority, however, were young or middle-aged stalwarts, but all were equally eager for the fray. As a result the South London Liberal Club, which some time ago was allowed to lapse, has been reorganized under highly favorable auspices, with an efficient staff of officers, and it is safe to say that it will give a good account of itself in the approaching campaign.

Among the many present were Mr. C. H. Hyman, M. P., Mr. Robt. Kilgour, Ald. Gerry, Dr. R. Jarvis, F. Macle, Dr. Reynolds, Messrs. Carpenter and Snodgrass, John Laing, John Shaw, J. O'Donnell, W. Packham, Thos. McLeod, Charles Ferguson, Harry Griffin, Alfred Wilkins, E. Leary, E. Park, H. Latta, R. Summers, A. Hunter, John Macpherson, John Norton, Donald Ferguson, Frank Millar, and others.

On motion of Ald. Gerry, the veteran Robert Kilgour was made chairman, and in a few well-chosen words introduced Mr. Charles S. Hyman, M. P., who was given a warm greeting.

Mr. Hyman said he did not propose to make a political address. It gave him great pleasure to meet his South London friends, whom he hoped to have as his constituents in the next election. They had put up many a good fight there, in municipal, provincial and Dominion contests, and it well organized, there was no fear of their being at the rear in the next campaign. Nowhere could there be found more energetic or enthusiastic Liberals than the members of the old South London Club, and he hoped the new organization would be equally a monument of Liberalism in the future. Mr. Hyman then spoke of how South London had at last been given her proper place as a part of the city constituency, instead of being tacked on to a county riding. He referred to the new organization of the redistribution committee, owing to the changes in population, and other causes, and claimed that the committee had accomplished its task by giving the water being cold, seeing that the fires had been going for some time.

The following verdict was returned: "That the said James Burnett came to his death by being scalded by the explosion of a boiler in connection with the heating of the Military

School. We further find the Government to blame in connection with said explosion, by not having a competent engineer in charge, as an accident some years ago occurred under similar circumstances by the valves being closed."

LIBERALS OF SOUTH LONDON ARE NOW READY FOR ACTIVE SERVICE

Club Organized at a Lively Meeting Held in Treblecock's Hall—Officers Elected.

For a long time has Treblecock Hall seen an enthusiastic meeting of South London Liberals such as gathered within its walls last evening. Numerous veterans who had served in former strenuous campaigns were there; the majority, however, were young or middle-aged stalwarts, but all were equally eager for the fray. As a result the South London Liberal Club, which some time ago was allowed to lapse, has been reorganized under highly favorable auspices, with an efficient staff of officers, and it is safe to say that it will give a good account of itself in the approaching campaign.

THE BARRACKS EXPLOSION

Coroner's Jury Hears the Last of the Evidence.

More Witnesses Prove That Valves on Both Boilers Were Closed.

The closing session of the jury, which has been investigating the death of Lance-Corporal Burnett and Pte. Thos. Worswick, victims of the Wolsley Barracks explosion, was held at the police station last night before Coroner Dr. Piper. Half a dozen witnesses were examined, among them being Quartermaster-Sergeant, Dunstey, and Pte. Walter Worswick both of whom were in the boiler-room at the time of the accident, and were seriously injured. Ptes. Sandy and Tait (who were in an adjoining room), and Messrs. Edward Holland and Thomas J. Cook, plumbers. The latter gave evidence to the effect that they had examined the ruined boilers and found the two valves on each closed. This they attributed as the cause of the explosion. Pte. Worswick stated that he shut the valves when the fires were quickly heated. He turned the valves on again, however, before re-starting the fires. When he and his comrades heard the noises in the pipes previous to the explosion two of them went upstairs, and turning on a tap found that the water in the pipes was cold. He could not account for the water being cold, seeing that the fires had been going for some time.

The following verdict was returned: "That the said James Burnett came to his death by being scalded by the explosion of a boiler in connection with the heating of the Military

IN SNOW AT GLANWORTH

L. E. and D. R. R. Train in a Bank for Three Hours.

Extra Engine Required to Release It—Car Ferry Caught in Ice.

The cold weather of yesterday made more trouble for the railways. The Lake Erie train from St. Thomas, which is due to arrive in this city at 5:40, became snowbound at Glanworth and did not arrive until 8:10. The efforts of the engineer to pull his train into London exhausted the water in the boiler, and the engineer left his train at Glanworth and came into London for a fresh supply. Another locomotive accompanied him back to Glanworth, and with the assistance of both engines the snowbound train was hustled to its destination. There were but a few passengers on the train.

The C. P. R. has not been having a great deal of trouble with snow along its main line between Windsor and Toronto. The snow to the east of the
