My Reverend Brethren and Brethren of the Laity:

Since last we were assembled in synod funds for this mission. it has pleased our heavenly Father to entered upon the work in 1859. He was confronted with no ordinary difficulties, the vast size of the province, the unsettled state of the Indians, the inrush of miners to the Cariboo gold fields; but on the other hand he was well supported by fellow workers, including such men as the present Bishop of Norwich; and there was no lack of money, which was poured in ungrudgingly from the mother church. Such was the commencement. and after that it is only those who have been behind the scenes who have known of the troubles and anxieties which my predecessor had to face, for those who only read his reports or listened to his addresses when he visited the Old Country could never have formed the least idea of what he had to bear. To my own mind this seems the distinguishing feature of his character, his indomitable courage amidst perplexities which would have fairly daunted most

In 1879 he saw the division of the diocese and the appointment of his brother bishops of New Westminster and Caledonia, reserving to himself the jurisdiction of Vancouver island and the adjacent islands. The closing years of his ong episcopate witnessed a considerable increase in the population of Victoria, and in 1891 the Bishop added five to the number of the clergy of the diocese, and in the last synod that he held in 1892 added two more, making a total of 22 actively engaged in ministerial work. His resignation of the see took place in November, 1892, and on his arrival in England it seemed as though his departure was at hand. But gradually he recovered his bodily strength, and was able to undertake the work of a small country parish in the diocese of Nor-

The present amount of the capital of the mission fund is $30,500, and if this additional sum is collected and the grant alas! been in vain, and in spite of the $38,000, and will always be connected with the name of the first bishop of the diocese, or the "Bishop Hills Memorial Clergy Endowment Fund "

I have to record the resignation of the Rev. J. B. Hewetson, and within the last standing committee of the S. P. G. to Rev. J. B. Hewetson, and within the last month the Rev. G. W. Taylor has resigned the charge of St. Alban's, Nanaimo. I find, however, that there will be no diminution in the number of our clergy, as the Rev. S. Asquith has been appointed assistant curate to the Rev. C. E. Cooper in charge of the district of Wellington, Northfield and French colonial church.
