

Mr. Fletcher, beyond the Poplar Ridge in the Mer Bleue on June 21.

ARETHUSA BULBOSA, L. This lovely orchid was found in great profusion by Mr. Scott near the gas spring in the Mer Bleue in the second week of June.

POLYGONATUM GIGANTEUM, Dietr. Half a dozen specimens of this handsome plant were collected about a mile and a half from Casselman by Mr. Fletcher. They were growing in low ground along the Canada Atlantic Railway and undoubtedly indigenous. Stems 3-4 feet high, peduncles 3-6 flowered. The occurrence at Casselman of this and such plants as Thaspium aureum, Nutt., Aster Novae-Angliae, L., Rudbeckia laciniata, L., Helianthus decapetalus, L., Phlox divaricata, L., Saururus cernuus, L. & Carya alba, Nutt. is very remarkable, for all belong to a flora much more western and southern than that of Ottawa.

POTAMOGETON VASEYI, Robbins. Fine specimens of the rare form with emersed leaves and fruit spikes were collected by Mr. Scott, in August, at Kettle Island.

ERIOCAULON SEPTANGULARE, Withering. Specimens of this curious plant were collected in Lake Harrington, Que., on September 22. It had once previously been found by Mr. Latchford at Masham, Que.

ERIOPHORUM RUSSEOLIUM, Fries. The cotton rushes were exceptionally beautiful last season. E. vaginatum, L., with large silky white heads and the similar E. russeolum with its no less handsome tufts of tawny silk were very conspicuous in the Mer Bleue. E. gracile, Koch, and E. polystachyon, L. formed large beds of waving white tassels along the railway from the St. Louis Dam to the Rideau River. Later in the season E. Virginicum, L., both the type and the white variety were abundant at the Mer Bleue.

HELEOCHARIS TENUIS, Schultes. This species omitted from the Flora has been found by Mr. Cowley at Clarendon. It also occurs at several places about Ottawa.

ERAGROSTIS REPTANS, Nees. Two localities for this pretty little grass have been discovered near Ottawa by Prof. Macoun. On the road along the Ottawa to the west of the wharf at Buckingham in September, 1891, and in the same month in a disused quarry to the north of Brigham's Creek, Hull, Q.
