Money and Dreams.

He settled himself in his roomy chair to his big, old house, where he had lived so long that the city had grown up away and beyond him, leaving the house, which had been in a fashionable neighberhood, so far down town that there was little more than the hum of business to be heard all day mound it. The old man's housekeeper brought him a cool drink, and one of his nephews came in to enquire how he had stood the unusual heat of the day.

He had so many nephows and nieces to look after his comfort. Some even stayed in town all summer to be near him. When they tried to persuade him to go away for a little rest in the hot weather he would say:
"Rest! Who wants rest? If you le smoney cest it rusts-rusts! Turn it over, keep turning it over; it grows, it grows!" And he would add that the aummer was the best time of all for work. The old financier was the pos-sessor of many millions. But he walked alone. This evening he sat in the twilight which settled itself not and thick about him. The night was bringing no cooling breath. The roar of the metropolis was dying away in tired sobs outside. The city's life seemed sapped with the heat. Even the old man, who never stopped his work for anything, realized that it was unusually hot tonight. He fanned himself with his newspaper and took a sip from the glass which stood near him on the ta-

He closed his eyes. He felt such a strange sense of oppression. No, he was not dizzy. It had passed, opened his eyes and put up his hand to unfasten his coller. At his neck he touched a twisted cord of slik that was around it. He pulled at the cord and drew out its length. From it hung a eing-a silver sing-old-fashioned and worn, and on it two raised hearts ly-ing against each other and rubbed smooth by time.

He sat now with his eyes closed again and his hand folded over the wing on his breast. He dreamed once more, and it was his last dream. It was summer-yes-but it was nearly fifty years ago. The dust and roar of the city gave way to the scent and quiet of an old garden; the heat to the dew of a country evening, its breeze Rightly moving the leaves of the trees and fluttering the ruffes of a girl's swalln frock, with its patiern of sumamer blossoms upon it.

A boy-such a boylsh country bosdook the silver ring, then new and whining, from his pocket and put it on the hand of the girl in the flowered mouslin frock. Then they kissed each other, and the girl fell to sobbing, with ther arms about her companion's neck, and he spoke:

"Nover mind, dear; Annie, dear. mm going away to make a fortune, and arm coming back for you, and we will he married, and I will take you away the the city, and you will be sich and have everything you want."

"But I don't like the city. I should me'so afraid and so confused, and you amight not love me there as you do mow here in the country. People in the city forget each other so."

"No, they don't; not if they really Move each other, and I love you. Noth-ing can ever make me forget you. See, mot as long as even "g comes after the May and the stars come with it."
They kissed each other again.

The ring came back to him in a letter with a flower fr ni Annie's grave. Mever once did he go to seek the grave to rest by it a moment. Work hecame his love and gold the star that

The Expenditures Estimated at £176,359,000 ne Compared With £103.100.000 Before Peace Was Proclaimed...The Retimate of Heyeans Better by £4,050,000,

London, June 10 .-- A Parliamentary paper issued to-day presents the revised figancial statement for 1902 03. It is estimated that the expenditure will total £176,359,000 ($881,795,000), and that the revenue will amount to £162. 435,000 ($762,175,000). The deficit will be met out of the proceeds of a consols loan of £29,920,000 ($149,000,000), leaving £5,995,000 ($29,080,000) available for contingencies and the redemption of part of the national debt-

When delivering his budget speech on the 14th of April last, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, estimated the total expendi-ture for the financial year at £193,-109,000, made up of £129,159,000 for ordinary expo-liture, £45,450,000 for war, and £48,500,000 to bring home troops, etc. The estimate then given of the revenue was £147,785,000, leaving an estimated deficit of about £45,000,-

FUTURE POLICY OF BRITAIN. A. R. Colqubonn's Paper Before the Colonial Institute.

London, June 11.-Mr. Archibald R. Colquhoun's paper, read last night before the Colonial Inatitute, was an able and comprehensive aurvey of the future policy of the British Empire as essentially a colonia: policy. It was not an alarmist paper, but a cool, well-reasoned argument, pointing to the conclusion that the empire must be bound together by federation. Mr. Colquhoun advocated, with the approval of a large and intelligent audience in Whitchall rooms, a closer commercial union between the mother country and the colonies, representation of the colstitute, was an able and comprehensive the colonies, representation of the colonies in an imperial Council and measures for common defence.

He discussed the project of a British zollverein and preferential doll a within the empire without committing himself to any definite scheme, and contended that Parliament was overwhelmed with routine business and that an Imperial Council was indispensable, since fresh impulses from the colonics arere needed in order to invigorate national polloy. He described Britain as ill equi ped for the described Britain as ill equi iped for the desperate atruggle for existence new going on among nations, and asserted that colonials must come forward and contribute to the expenses of the Imper-lal household. Air. Colquhoun's paper was closely followed, and his warnings against one-sided free trade in a pre-tection world, and against the annexa-tion of British shipping lines by Am-erican capitalists, when Germany was in a position to command a maritime alliance, were warmly applauded. Colonel Denison present Golonel Denison presented his argument for levyl t a war tax on all imports in all Editish ports with force and lucidity, ar' replied both to Mr. James Bryos and Mr. John Morley's arguments against the bread tax.

The discussion was continued by

The discussion was continued by several eminent colonial representatives, and was a most animated one. It was a significant demonstration of the fact that while Sir Michael Alicks-Beach has proclaimed hat the British Empire cannot be sacrificed for the sal of the col-onics a combination for b siness and defence has become the great issue in English politics.

The Sense of Humor.

He was an ordinarily mild and inoffersive little gentleman who had lived for many happy, uneventful years in farther Chelsen, when a volinto his hands. In this he read of delicious practical jokes played with un-failing success by Vivier and Sothern, and of how that great comedian, J. L. Toole, brought confusion to a baker's shop displaying in the window a sign. "Families supplied," by requesting that three girls and a boy should be sent round as soon as possible.
"This," no said, "is the exercise of true wit." Then he went out, still chuckling.

"That 's in the window." "But how nice does mother make

"Jim," said the woman, calling into space, "here's a cove wants to know how nice mother makes it," and she "Garn," came a beery voice; "must be balmy on the crumpet. Turn 'im

Nothing daunted, the little man went "Supposing she doesn't make it at all nice? Supposing she makes it very nasty, what then?" No answer.

The woman went on frying onlons, but her eye gleamed. "What if I don't remember any mother? What If she never made any thing at all? What If---" He got no further, but found himself thrust violently through the door to the pavement outside, while a voice admonished him: "Ere, you, don't come interfering 'ere—if yer wants a sausage and mashed, say so. If not, get out." And as he retreated hastily, though with dignity, the voice followed faintly: "Bedlam-that's the place for the likes of you-Bedlam."

The discomfited little gentleman had walked nearly a mile before his recov-ery was completed by d sign, hung over a boot shop, which caught his eye, "Wear Parkinson's Boots," ran the legend.

The little man fairly leaped into the shop.

"Why?" he asked, in mild enquiry.

"We keep all sizes, sir." "Yee, but I don't know that I care about wearing another man's boots." "Of course, air, if you prefer to go on buying boots like those you've got on; but," with a deprecatory smile, "we can turn you out a much better article for fifteen shillings."

"But my name is Pettigraw, and I don't think it would be legal for me to wear Parkinson's boots-it looks like robbery." "Hobbery?" said the assistant sharply. "Our prices are as low as they can be for sound wearing qualities. . If there's nothing further to-day, sir," holding open the door, "good morn-

A Useful Helpmate.

The editor of the Grapevine "Tele-graph," after spending all years without a break, in the editorial barness, felt himself entitled to a vacation, and went away to the mountains for a month's hunting and fishing, teaving his wife in charge of the paper. On his return he was astonished to find his office overflowing with potatoes. Everything that could be turned into a receptacle was filled with them. Each pigeonhole in his desk contained a potate. The drawer of his editorial table was bursting with potatoes. Old ink-logs, lined with papers, were filled and heaped with them. There were potatoes in the coal-bucket, in the ashpan, and even in the stove-itself.

They were no small potatoes, either Every one of them was as his as his fist, and some were as bly as two fists. The collection would have taken a preenium at a county fair.
"Lucy," he said, after the greetings were over, "what does all this mean?" "Oh," she almost sobbed, "I wanted to do something original, and so I an-nounced, in the first number of the paper I printed after you went away, that the 'Telegraph' would be sent for one year to the person sending us the largest potato raised in this county, for aix months to the person sending the next largest, and for three months to the one sending the third largest. The po-tatoes began coming it right away. and they're been coming it. right away, and they're been coming ever since. Some persons, I am afraid, have tried to get all three of the prizes. # THE SUPPLYING COURT,

Prospects of the Barly Referencest of My Heary Strong,

Ottawa, June 10 -The latest rumor in political circles is that Sir Henry Strong is to retire from the Supremo Court at an early date and be succeeded as Chief Justice by Hon. Justice Taxchereau. It is also sald that Mr. Justice Armour will be made a Judge of the Supreme Court. Who would get the Ontario Judgeship vacated by such a shufile does not appear. Sir Henry Strong would not, according to report, retire immediately to private life, but would take the Chairman-hip of the commission to revise the statutes at a handsome remuneration. The Globe correspondent heard of the possibility of these changes in a reliable quarter, but is unable to give them as official. He was assured some days ago, however, that important developments were soon likely to take place in regard to Si Henry Strong's retirement. The ques-tion as to who would succeed Sie Henry Strong in the event of his withdrawal from the Bench has often been discussed, and the general opinion seems to be that precedent must govern, if this view is correct, then Mr. Justice Tascherenu would be called upon to preside by virtue of seniority, and it would be the first time since its formation that the court has had a Chief Justice of French-Canadlan de-cent.

THE COAL STRIKE.

Labor Commissioner Weight Con-oludes His Investigation,

New York, June 10 .- This afternoon Commissioner of Labor Wright had a two hours' conference with President Base of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, President Oliphant of the Delaware & Hudson Company and Pres-ident Tuesdale of the Delaware, Lacka-wanna & Western. Mr. Wright said that the books had been opened and he had secured all facts and figures, and now had sufficient information from both sides of the coal atrike. He declared his investigation as practically over.

The information secured by Mr.
Wright for the President will touch at the root of the difficulty, and will ex-plain the "real causes" leading to the great industrial conflict, which causes have been jealously guarded on both sides. Mr. Wright declares that he has not been exting as an arbitrator or nanot been acting as an arbitrator or pacificator.
