[Royal Assent Promulgated 3rd December, 1841.] WHEREAS it is desired on behalf of the United Church of England and Ireland, in the Province of Upper Canada, that provision should be made by law for the internal management, by the Members of the said Church, of the Temporalities thereof, and also for allowing the endowment thereof; and it is just and expedient that such provision should be made: Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, the soil and freehold of all Churches of the Communion of the said United Church of England and Ireland, now erected or hereafter to be erected in the said Province, and of the Church-yards and Burying-grounds attached or belonging thereto, respectively, shall be in the Parson or other Incumbent thereof, for the time being, and that the possession thereof shall be in the Incumbent for the time being, and the Church-wardens to be appointed as hereinafter is mentioned, by whatever title the same may now be held, whether vested in Trustees for the use of the Church, or whether the legal estate remains in the Crown, by reason of no Patent having been issued, though set apart for the purposes of such Church, Church-yard or Burying-ground: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to affect the rights of any other Church, or Body of Christians, to any Landed Property, or Church now erected, but that the same shall remain as if this Act had not been

THE CHARACTER OF CHRIST. In the lowest view, (considering his familiar manifestation afford much of it: which yet is but an imaginary supposition; of himself on earth) we shall find him to have been the most for in effect hardly do all such accommodations of life concur in amiable and the most venerable person, beyond all comparison, any state. First, Ignorance, that in so thick a mist of errors and sects, we know not how to find out the truth; and that which tops ceremonies,—Dean Sherlock. our folly is, that we are grown too wise in our own conceits.-Second; Concupiscence, that pestilence of the soul, whose cankered blossoms are still sprouting up in the most regenerate hearts; this weakened the power of Sampson, infatuated the wisdom of Solomon, defiled the holiness of David. Third; Selflove, an hidden poison, the rust of the mind, the moth of holiness the parent of envy, the original of all vices. Fourth; Discontent, which makes us prize what we want, slight what we enjoy, more sensible of sufferings than of blessings; the little children which, for want of some toy which they affect, throw away all they have, and fall a crying; we follow contentment hard, but as fools do an ignis fatuus, always at a distance. Five; Preposterous fear; if we do ill we fear magistrates; if we do well we fear detractors: if we be rich we fear thieves; if poor, creditors: if we hate we fear enemies; if we love, corrivals. Sixth; Distrust; we all say we trust God, but, for the most part sooner with our souls than with our estates, and hardly without a pawn, as usurers would trust a bankrupt. Lastly Hypocrisy; if there be a mote in the eye, there is a beam in the heart; if there be a beam in the eye there is a stack of mischief in the heart. We look one way, and row another way; blow hot and cold with the same mouth, and have our hearts more double than our breath. We flatter for advantage, and we slander for advantage; we serve God for advantage, and if need be, we serve the Devil for advantage. Then since we have all made shipwreck of baptismal grace by sin; since all without exception, do stand in need of a second plank to save them from drowning; it remains that we make choice of one of the two presented to us-dissimulation or conversion; covering or confessing-"He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whose confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy.—Archbishop Bramhall.

> > WORLDLY WISDOM.

Its care and aim is, not to please God, but to come off among men. It is more concerned for what is like to anger and offend them, than for what will offend him. As the "Chief Rulers were," who, "believing in Christ," knew that to own him was most pleasing to God; but yet "they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue." It is for suiting its carriage, not to the reality of things, but to their diseased opinions. Its maxim is, not to side with the truth, but to swim with the stream. It is for doing what is in vogue, and seeming to approve what is by most applauded, whether it be good or bad. It will assert an ill cause, when the multitude are for it; and desert a good cause, when 'tis generally decried. It will tounce any duty or virtue when 'tis exploded; and strike in with the oppressors of much envied and hated persons, when ney are trampled under foot; though it happens to know that they are innocent, or knows not that they are in fault, or however faulty they are in other things, though it believe that they re greatly wronged in the present case, and suffer against jusce. It will always run along with all the violences of the imes; and that, as seeking, not what is really good, but what other men think and call so; not as studying to please God, but to live at quiet and please the world; steering all its course, not by truth and virtue which are a certain fixed thing, always one and the same; but by the uncertain blast of popularity or vulgar opinion .- Rev. John Kettlewell.

Nothing consequently there is productive of any sound content to the fastidious, impatient, greedy, and restless heart of man. > RASH SWEARING. What a sin must it be to swear vainly and rashly by the true God, the great, the Almighty God, that made and governs the whole world! Far greater, doubtless, than can be described. The mere speaking of him or taking his sacred name into our mouth is vain, and to no purpose, is a great sin, expressly forbidden in the third commandment; how much more the common swearing by it, and calling upon him to attest the truth of are committed against the laws of God, and so against his auyet how unlimited a good will to all the world: how remote he thority and power. But this is committed against his name, rigour and austerity; how diligently he turned the thoughts of to his face. Would a prince take it well, if his subjects should the multitude, from empty admiration of his oscourses or his call him, upon all occasions, to witness what they talk among works, to the conscientious performance of their own duties; themselves? Would be bear with such insolency, or suffer power, and inculcated on his followers the strongest warnings prince and his subjects are fellow-creatures: but for creatures to do this to their Almighty Creator, for dust and ashes to call reproved both the people and their rulers, yet vith what care the Sovereign of the world to vouch their impertinent talk and he secured the respect owing from the former o the latter: chat, is such a piece of impudence and presumption, that did with what simplicity and upright prudence he answered the objections and captious questions levelled against hm, however that any mortal should dare to do it, that they should dare to suddenly attacked by them; and though in so publica life tried take his sacred name into their polluted lips, which he hath so expressly commanded all men to fear and dread; "that thou mayest fear," saith he, "this glorious and fearful name, the

You pretend conscience, it may be, against hearing a form of prayer, or receiving the Sacrament kneeling, or being present when the minister uses a surplice in divine administrations.-Consider now whether you do not falsely pretend a divine auinequality, or effort exerted to raise himself up to, or support thority, when you have none: show me where God has forbid lated from time to time at such Vestry Meetings as the highest excellence that he ever displayed. In short, the aforesaid: Provided, nevertheless, that no alterations character of Jesus Christ, like the frame of God's creation, the more deeply it is studied, the more respectfully it will be admired. Some small particulars in each, yet much fewer than must be done in the worship of God but what he has commanded; superficial observers imagine, it may be easier to cavil at, than if you can do neither, as I am sure you cannot, then consider charges to be made in respect of such conveyances, to account for distinctly: but look at the whole of either, and what an impious thing it is to say, "Thus saith the Lord," when eases, and certificates, shall in like manner be regu- to every eye that is capable of taking in a whole, it will approve he hath not said it—to make new laws, and bind them upon your own consciences, and impose them upon other men, by your own private authority, which is a much heavier imposition than the observation of some few innocent and indifferent rites and

> Oh, what a pitiful thing is it, that man will not consider this, and leave the sin and pleasure of this world, and live godly; but is so blind and mad, that he will rather have a momentary and a very short and small pleasure than hearken to the will and pleasure of Almighty God, who can take away everlasting pain and woe, and give unto him everlasting felicity! That a great many of us are damned, the fault is not in God; "God would have all men to be saved." But the fault is in ourselves, and in our own madness, who had rather have damnation than salvation. Therefore, good people, consider these terrible pains in your minds which are prepared for the wicked and ungodly avoid all wickedness and sin; set before your eyes the wonderful joy and felicity, and the innumerable treasures, which God hath laid up for you that fear and love him, and live after his will and commandments; for no tongue can express, no eye hath seen, no heart can comprehend nor conceive, the great felicity that God hath prepared for his elect and chosen, as St. Paul witnesses. Consider, therefore, I say, these most excellent treasures, and exert yourselves to obtain the fruition of the ame. Continue not, neither abide nor wallow too long in your sins, like as a swine lieth in the mire. Make no delay to repent of your sin, and to amend your life, for you are not so sure to have repentance in the end. It is a common saying, "Late epentance is seldom sincere." Therefore consider this thing with yourself betimes, and study to amend your life; for what avails it to have all the pleasures of the world for a while, and after that to have everlasting pain and infelicity?-Bishop La-
