THE EMPRESS EUGENIE.

(From the London Globe.) PARIS, Friday.-The mysterious stranger who visited Viscomte Aguado at Chateau de Sivry, near Melup, at the commencement of the week, and passed through Paris this morning on her way to Switzerland, is now known to be the Empress Eugenie, who was formerly one of the most popular ladies in France. The Republic has acted with the utmost courtesy towards this unfortunate lady on more than one occasion. No preliminary authorization is required, and she has been permitted to pass through France several times unmolested. She has not sought to revive her former popularity, and she maintains her incognito with great severity. She is no longer the Empress surrounded by a crowd of courtiers, and accompanied by the cheers of the people, who would have carried triumph when she nursed the cholera-stricken at the hospital at Amiens, or when she was whispering kind words of comfort into the ears of those who wanted pecuniary assistance to place them on the right road, and give them courage to face the struggle for life. She is the broken-down widow, the child less mother who can never by comtorted. Sorrow has weighed heavily upon her. The Empire has had a reverse side to its medal, and the brunt of the evil day has fallen upon a woman. Like another august lady who mourns a good husband, the Empress has not out off her widow's weeds: her hair is turning grey, and those who saw her a dozen years ago at the Tuileries so hopeful and happy, could not recognise her. now. On Tuesday the Empress, accompauled by M. Raimbeaux and Viscomt-see Aguado, paid a visit to the chateau at Fontainebleau where Napoleon the First bid farewell to his veteran guards, and they presented arms for the last time to the modern Cæsar. Fontainebleau holds an importanplace in the souvenirs of every friend of the Empire. It was there that the corridors outside the door of his cell lest brilliant bunting parties were given, and the guests were invited to witness the quartering of the deer by torchlight. Thpalace had remained intact since it was occu nied by the Emperor. The chairs of State in the balcony of the theatre where the iroupe from the Comedie Francaise came down to perform for the amusement of the Imperial unests still hear the traces of wear, and there are rooms in the palace which look as if they were inhabited, and as the occupants momentarily absent would return at any moment. The Empress was recognized by some of the old servitors who have been left in charge by the R-public. The party was asked to wait until somtourists had concluded their visit, and then the Empress was conducted silently in the most abandoned, and constant services throughout those rooms of which she was once the most brilliant ornament. What polgnant souvenirs must have been awakened in her breast as she wandered from room to room, recognising each spot, and as in tears she leant over the bed in the room whic was used by the young Prince who died our the chambers which had belonged to her dead son, and her grief was communi cated to all around The visit occupied over two hours. Now the Empress has visited Complegne and Fontainebleau. Saint Cloud and the Tuileries are in rulos, and the Esysee Wilson and his bride. The villas at Biarritz and at Aix have been transformed into hotels, and the municipality of Marseilles seess to take p seession of the late Imperial residence built on the town land out of the private purse of the Emperor. Nothing is left, and when M. Gambetta marries the princess of his day dreams, imitating, as is his custom, that imperial legend he has R umanian poetry by her appeared some time scoffed at so often, the eagles will be re-

it, on their cost collars. Before commencing their work these officers, having received a few months' instruction in Bible history and the rs, sign a paper stating that they make no claim for support or salary, promise to work nine hours a day, to obey orders, to do no courting for twelve months, and not to propose marriage without permission from headquatters. They are expected to be "periectly ready to speak, pray, visit, sit still, travel or die at any moment; to be willing to be led and taught, and to be sent home again if they do not succeed; to be willing also to be evil-spoken of, hated, and despised, and even to be misrepresented, misunderstood, and undervalued at head ounrters,"

" Halleluj h Free and Easy " meetings, and "Hosannah tea parties," are engaged in, in order to induce sinners to enter their place of meeting, whatever it may happen to be. The army is now putting up permanent "barracks" at the local posts. As the stranger goes about the streets he may chance to see one of the processions. It will perhaps be led by a determined looking woman, carrying a banner. With her, bat walking backwards and marking time with his arm, will be the leader of the music. Perhaps forty soldiers will be marching behind, singing at the top of their voices, songs of original words set to stirring old tunes, sacred or secular, just as it may happen. The words are doggerel, and composed of the phrases of the people without attempt at refinement. The soug beginning.

THE GUITEAU TRIAL.

WASHINGTON, NOV. 15 .-- After a large number of jurors had been disposed of, Michael Sheehan, who had no opinion on Guitean's crime exc-pt that the "man was out of his head," was sworn as the sixth juror. Samuel F. Hobbe, a native of Maryland, plasterer, answered all the questions satisfactorily and was sworn as the seventh juror. G W Gates, a young machinist, answered all the quistions satisfactorily and sworn as the eighth. juror. After that, for about an hour, every man called confessed he had formed "a firm" or "decided" or "unalterable" opinion regardiug the prisoner's guilt, and he was excused. Raiph Wormley, colored, thought he could render a fair verdict, and after consultation. between the counsel and the prisoner and his brother, Scoville said the defence would accept the juror. Wormely was sworn as the ninth juror. The seventy-five talismen having been exhausted, the Marshal was ordered to summon seventy-five more for to-morrow. The Court then adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 .- After a number of names of men had been challenged, T. Hein. lein, iron-worker, was finally chosen as the 11th juror in the Guiteau case. There were thirty-two men examined between the 10th and 11th jurors. Joseph Prather, commission merchant, was sworn as the 12th juror. The oath was administered to the jury as a whole. The District Attorney moved that the Cours adjourn to give the jurors an opportunity to stiend to private business. Scoville stated that he cid not approve of the paper obtained from the prisoner this morning. The assassin, in an excited manner, insisted that until he did so he would defend himself. The Court then adjourned.

WASHINGTON, NOV. 17 .- The following is the statement made by District Attorney Corkhill :- " May it please the Court and gentlemen of the Jury : The prisoner at the Bar stands before you charged with the murder of James A. Garfield. Under any circum stances there rests a grave and responsible obligation on every man who is called upon are numbers, also, of uniformed men and in the discharge of his duty under the law to render a decision upon which depends the very informal. There is much groan- life of a fellow creature. And while it is and shouting and swinging of true that the offence charged in the present s and wringing of hands. It is the second time in our history that a citizen, chosen by the people of the United States to discharge the high and responsible duties of President, has fallen a victim to a lawless assassin during his period of incumbency of office. But in the former case we were just emerging from the shadows of a long and bloody war, the country had been racked by commotions and stirred by It is believed that the coronation of the civil feuds throughout the length and breadth of the land. Nearly every household mourned the loss of relatives or friends slain on the hotly-contested battle fields of the Republic. It was a danger which thoughtful men had anticipated. It was a culamity which patriots had feared, and when it came, with all its dread consequences, it was accepted as one of the results of the then disordered and discord. ant condition of public affairs. But we had passed from the arena of war, the sword had been beaten into a plowshare and the spear into a pruning hook, the country was united, peace reigned at home and abroad. There were no local dissensions, there were no in. testine strifes, seed time and harvest had come and gone, the battle fields were redeemed from the scars and havoc of their bloody contests, and were blossoming with the fruits of Guiteau and Scoville followed, and the former, apparently convinced, subsided into absolute quiet and devoted himself to his papers.

The District Attorney then offered in evidence certain letters which were yesterday read to Blaine, and identified by him. Ed. Wagner, who was called as a witness, failed to respond. Joseph Sharp testified that he did not see the shooting, but saw the prisoner attempting to escape, and witnessed his arrest. Ella Bidgley testified to hearing a conversation between Guiteau and a hackman, while the former was arranging to be driven, to the cemetery. She also witnessed the shooting. She was closely pross-questioned by Scoville, but adhered strictly in every particular to her evidence in chief. After several other witnesses had been examined, the court took recess.

On resuming Guiteau got up and said :---"Your Honor, Judge Mugruder, of Muryland, has offered to assist me in the trial, and I want to write him to meet me here on Monday morning. I don't know if Scoville knows about it, but I want him in the case. Scovil'e is doing splendidly, but I want him to have assistance. This is the only way I can get anytoing before the public, to announce it in Court." No objection was offered, and Guiteau, apparently satisfied, busied bimself writing occasionally turning to Scoville to assure him that Magruder was a splendid man, and he wanted him in the case.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 -The crowd about the Court House being greater this morning than ever it has been found necessary to issue tickets of admission. Guiteau expressed himself well satisfied with the progress of his case. Scoville stared that he was not aware that Judge Magruder had teudered his services. He had received several offers from iawyers, strangers to him, but he feared he might make a greater mistake by taking a stranger at this late stage of the trial than by proceeding alone. He does not expect to have any other assistance than Robinson. WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 .- In opening his defence, Guiteau, retaining his seat, began ;--" Your Honor, 1 was not aware I was expected to speak this morning."

Scoville here leaned over and whispered to him, when Guiteau retorted sharply and with impatience, "I won't stand up; I'm not afraid to, however, but I have only a moment to speak and will keep my seat. I do not care to say more than was published last if (Monday in my address to the public. I presume the jury all saw it. I have no set speech to make. I appear as my own counsel, and my idea is to make corrections as we go along just as I have done for the past three or four days. I don't mean any discourtesy to any one, only I want to get at the facts. If any one says I owe them $20. and I don't I will deny it on the spot. My idea is to take things when they are hot, not let them get cold and suffer from misrepresentation. Of course, I shall go on the stand at the proper time and be examined and cross exemined. My idea, however, is to meet misstatements when it is hot instead of waiting to let the matter get digested and misunderstood. I think the true way is to interject my statements as the case proceeds. I have no set speech to make, but am much obliged to your honor and (o my counsel for the courtesy of this invitation."

Scoville then addressed the jury at considerable length. Much, he said, had been introduced in the evidence thus far which, in his mind, should have no bearing upon the case. All men shared the same opinion relative to the sufferings of the President. It was not pleasant to contemplate these things, and when they were presented to the jury they must exercise an influence. The only question, however, for the jury to consider was whether the prisoner ki-led the President, and whether, at the time, he was in such a condition mentally as to render him. responsible for the action. The speaker, with no attemptat oratorical effect, presented in a plain, matter-of-fact maunor, the points he proposed to make and upon which the de-

There died on the 7th of November last an old resident of Hochelega named Michel Laroche. He was very wealthy and his obsequies were celebrated with becoming pomp in the Catholic Onurch of that village. During the progress of the funeral ceremonies several medical students were observed in the church. This fact occasioned remark for the reason that a few of the fraternity had been heard to boast that they were determined to have old Laroche's body at any price. This put on their guard the friends of the deceased. After the body had been deposited in the church vaults they placed a policeman to watch near the building, in order that the resurrectionists' plans might be frustrated Three days after the funeral a young man roughly, but not badly dressed, presented himselt before the sexton and asked employment. He stated he would be willing to work for anything just to be enabled to put in the winter. He was given work firing the furnace which heats the building. About two days after that two other young men visited the cure, and, professing great piety, persuaded him to permit them visit the church when they thought fit. On the evening of the 11th of November two medical students entered the saloon of Mr. Leonard, situated near the church, and, after drinking for about half an hour, commenced to fight. The police were sent for, and as the man who was watching the remains of Laroche was the nearest to the scene he was summoned. The combatants offered explanations and after half-an-hour's talk they departed. When the policeman returned to his post his beart misgave him that something was wrong. The coffin of Laroche was visited, but the remains had disappeared. The hue and cry was raised but without any result. The young man employed by the sexton and the two pions devotees also disappeared at the same time as the body. Subsequent events proved them to be nothing less than medical students. In a word, the whole affair was an admirably arranged plot to obtain the body of Lisroche, which by a chain of circumstances succeeded, without a single flaw in the working.

Deputy: High Constable Contant received orders to find the body. if possible. He worked on the case for four days. After searching the dissecting rooms of Bishop's College and the Laval Bishop's College and the Laval University, the wonded his way on Saturday alternoon to McGill University. There, lying cold and stiff on the marble slab. in one of the rooms dedicated to anatomical research, he found the body of Laroche. Work had been already commenced on it, for a portion of the arm was removed, and the breast laid open. He immediately restored the remains to the family, and there the maiter rests for the present It is believed however, that the affair will come into the courts, . sete a

A few days ago the Tichborne claimant was visited in Portsmouth Convict Prison by Mr. Guildford Onslow, the interview lasting half an hour. The claimant, although told of the immense dimensions of the petition being got up in his favor, seemed to have lost all hopes of any remission of his sentence, and expressed his belief that the Government intended to keep him there for the full term. Ten years of the sentence expired on Oct. 29 and by a continuance of good marks he will have three years and eight months more to serve before he is free.

A pathway only eighteen inches wide is cut into the side of Slate Mountain, near Leadville, at a height, over an almost per pendicular chasm, of 1,500 feet. Few men who use it have strong enough nerves to walk upright, but instinctively crouch or "coon it," as the local saying is. Bichard O'Gorman was last week elected a judge of the Superior Court in New York. THE SALVATION ARMY.

A MILITARY ORGANIZATION WITH RELIGIOUS AIMS-ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK-VISIT TO CANADA POSTPONED FOR THE PERSENT -----A GLANCE INTO THE INTERIOR.

A short time ago General Booth, the com. ander-in-chief of the comparatively new religious organization in England known as the Salvation Army, determined upon sending a detachment to Canada with a view to carry iug on here a struggle with irreligion and im piety. The salvation soldiers have not ar rived yet, and the reason for the postpone ment of their visit is the heavy fighting the army has now to do at home. Not only. it sopears, have the soldiers to light with spritual foes, but they find material enemies in the persons of roughs, w. o assail them with stones and other equally deadly weapons wherever they appear. In fact there have been riots in some of the towns in which the army carried ou operations, and the Government has threatened that if the peace is not preserved the army will have to discontinue its fight.

THE MOVEMENT OBIGINATED

in the forloru East End of London in the year 1865, under William Booth, the present leader, who preached in the open air at first, and afterwards in old theatres and dancingballs. He spoke in the phraseology of the people, and taught his converts at once to speak in public and to sing in vigorous rythmical melody, which has intentionally all the noise and swing of pot-house singing. The movement grew and spread over several quarters of London, and out into the conutry. It has now a central staff of forty-five picked men and women, each having his department of business in the general head quarters, which are which we hold by so fragile a tenure, is dear to us all, and when it is brought to a close not in the usual order and course of nature, but promaturely by violence, the human mind is appalled with terror. When a mau holding a position of eminence and power fails a causeless viciim to a murderous stroke. we realize still more fully the awfulness of the deed which produces this result." Evidence was then given by Mr. Blaine and the resident Minister of Veuezula, who gave a description of the scene at the depot on the morning of the shooting. Mrs. Sarah White, matron ot the Baltimore and Potomac Depot ladies' waiting room, explained the | of Quebec. circumstances of the shooting in detail substantially as published in her statement obtained soon after the shooting. She recognized Guitean as the person who fired the shot. Robert Parke, Ticket Agent of the Baltimore & Potomac Railroud, testified that he witnessed the firing of the second shot by the prisoner, rushed from the office out to the corridor, and, as Guiteau was fleeing, seized him and kept nold until relieved by the police. In the cross-examination Parke reiterated in detail his statement of the circumstances of the shooting and said the prisoner was moving very rapidly when he seized him! He did not see the first shot fired, but rushed from the office immediately after it occurred. Witness was interrogated at length, but the direct testimony was unshaken. He explained that the prisoner mentioned several times that a letter to the General would explain everything.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.-Scoville requested the Court to take measures to prevent the prisoner from giving the public unauthorized communications, and also to prevent the annoying interruptions of the prisoner in the Court room. This brought on a scene, during which Guiteau demanded that Scoville should go out of the case, declaring the latter was no criminal lawyer, had no sense, and talked one thing to him in private and another in public. Scoville endeavored to explain to the Court, but Guiteau became more and more excited, and addressed himself alternately to the Court, to Scoville and to the bailiffs, who were endeavouring to keep uusband and wife. This was carried out as far | Guiteau shouted; excitedly, "I don't care if fence would rely. Without concluding his opening address, Scoville requested that the court would allow him time and permit him to finish to morrow. This was granted, and the Court adjourged.

Among the witnesses examined to-day was Surgeon-General Barnes, who testified that Garfield's wound was mortal, and was the cause of his death. Surgeon Lamb testified that he examined the records and found no case of injury of the same extent in which a man recovered.
